From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Jan. 24, 1872.

The Twombly substitute came up on its final passage in the Assembly this morning and received 12 votes to 29 in opposition. No attempt was made by anyone to delay or obstruct its passage, as it is generally understood by those who fought it on Monday night that it can never pass the Senate in its present shape, and it was deemed unnecessary to renew the strife over it in the lower House. The Senate will unquestionably adhere to the bill reported in that body by the Committee on Cities, which does not differ materially from the Twombly bill, with the exception that it omits the name of Gen. COCHRANE from the Board of Audit. Some Senators are in favor of also dropping the name of Mr. STEWARD and leaving the Board to consist of two members—Mr. GREEN and Mr. VAN NORT. Mr. WHITLOCK'S amendment to the Twombly bill, providing for public sittings of the Board of Audit, will doubtless be incorporated in the Senate bill, as it is admitted on all sides to be a wise provision. The Fenton men, who were disposed to be so jubilant over the result of Monday night's vote, begin to discover that they have not achieved much of a victory after all.

THE GRAND JURY BILL.

Mr. FRENCH'S bill providing for the session of two Grand Juries in New-York at the same time was also put on its third reading today and passed by a vote by a vote of 83 to 28. FIELDS made a long argument against it, claiming that it was unnecessary and would lead to conflict and confusion in the finding of indictments. He said that London, with a population of 3,000,000, only had one Grand Jury, and New-York, with less than a third the number of inhabitants certainly could not need more than one. He undertook to assert that the last murder in New-York City which deprived the world of JIM FISK and consigned STOKES to a murderer's cell, could be traced directly to the existence of two Grand Juries holding sessions at the same time. The Assembly could not see the force of FIELDS' logic and promptly passed the bill.

NEW BILLS.

A large number of new bills were introduced, of which the most important, as affecting the City, were a bill to extend Madison-avenue north of One Hundred and Twentieth-street; a bill limiting deposits in savings banks for a single individual to $3,000; a bill relating to quacks and quack medicines, and a bill regulating the quality and price of gas supplied by the New-York gas companies.

THE RAPID TRANSIT QUESTION.

The question of rapid transit for the City of New-York is likely to occupy a large share of attention here this Winter as it has every Winter for the last ten years. A multitude of rival schemes are already being urged upon the attention of members, and it will be fortunate for the people if the projectors of competing plans do defeat, in their rivalry, the grand object which all have in view. Four bills have been introduced thus far, viz.: The Pneumatic Tunnel bill, for a double tunnel road under Broadway; the Manhattan Company's old bill, which was vetoed by Gov. FENTON, for an underground road on the Broadway line; VANDERBEUGH'S bill, which is substantially that of the Pneumatic, of which he claims the original proprietorship, and the Metropolitan bill, commonly known as "Swain's Three-tier Road," which has been here for several years past. Among the projects now here, but not yet introduced, is Mr. CHURCH'S scheme for two roads on the "Arcade" plan, one east and one west of Broadway, running to the Harlem River. It is proposed that this road shall be built and run by the City, under the direction of a Board of Commissioners, consisting of H. G. Stebbins, A. H. Green, Geo. M. Van Nort, Ex-Mayor Havemeyer, Ex-Mayor Opdyke, Hon. Jno. Wheeler and others, or their successors, the fare to be not more than five cents from the Battery to Harlem, and as much lower as may be found practicable after providing for running expenses, interest on bonds and sinking fund for their final redemption after fifty years. In case the City does not choose to build both roads, the Harlem, or any other railroad is to have the privilege of building one of them under the same restrictions as regards fare.

Another scheme which will be offered for the consideration of the Legislature by Mr. GARDINER, under the title of the "New-York Warehouse and Railway Company," combines the following comprehensive features:

First—To build wharves 100 feet wide and 500 feet long on iron columns, filled with masonry, and on these wharves fire-proof warehouses, so that ships can discharge directly into the warehouses or upon the wharves, as circumstances may require.

Second—A double-track railway around the City, on the bulkhead line, with turn-tables, so that the cars can be run on the wharves, and thus making a warehouse-railroad depot and wharf in one structure, thereby saving all the cartage of goods, beside preventing exposure to the weather and pilferers and thieves.

Third—A sub-surface railway, with four tracks, commencing at the Battery and following the line of Broadway to Union-square, whence one branch follows the line of Broadway to Ninth-avenue, thence under that avenue to One Hundred and Thirty-fourth-street, thence to Harlem River, where it meets the other branch from Union-square, by way of the Fourth-avenue, thus making a circle.

By this means the way travel and through travel are both accommodated, and it is claimed that five tracks can be used for the transportation of freight along the line during the night.

Fourth—In connection with the line on Fourth-avenue another road is to be built in Westchester County along the line of the Harlem River to a distance not exceeding fifteen miles, thence east to a point on the Sound, thence back again to Harlem, forming a circle. It is claimed that every dwelling on the Island of Manhattan will be brought within one-quarter of a mile of rapid transit, and that in no case will goods be required to be carted more than a quarter of a mile, and then only through the broad streets. The bill provides, also, for the appointment of a Commission who shall have power to control the location of the route or line of the road, and the manner of its construction. It is claimed that this will centralize business, and thus cheapen its transaction while it decentralizes population, and thus improves the health of the City and reduces the cost of living.

In addition to the above plans for rapid transit, there are parties here who propose to submit a bill providing for a Board of Engineers and business men, whose duty it shall be to examine any and all schemes for quick transit that may be submitted to it, and determine upon the best plan—the decision of the Board to be made within thirty days after the passage of the act, and to be final. The Board shall also have power to modify any plan submitted to it, and impose such restrictions upon the mode of its construction as the public interest may seem to require. It is claimed that great experience has proved the impossibility of getting any bill for quick transit through the Legislature which shall answer the objections of the Governor and at the same time be of such a character as to induce capitalists to build the road; that the Legislature is not the proper body to decide upon the details of any plan that may be submitted, and that there is no hopes of anything practical being done for the relief of New-York in the matter of quick transit except by a general bill, which shall leave to a competent Board of engineers and business men the task of deciding upon the merits of the rival schemes, and selecting such as will command the requisite capital to build it.

COMMISSIONERS OF APPEALS.

The Judiciary Committee of the Senate have reported favorably the concurrent resolutions amending the Constitution, so as to provide for an extension of the term of the Commission of Appeals. It empowers the Court of Appeals to transfer any of the causes now on its calendar, not exceeding five hundred in number, to the Commissioners whose term the Legislature is empowered to extend not exceeding two yearly. The resolutions having passed the last Legislature, the amendment will take effect immediately on their passage by the present one. Notwithstanding we have a Court of Appeals which devotes its whole time to the hearing and decision of appeals, it has been found utterly impossible to keep its calendar down within reasonable limits, and the auxiliary branch may yet have to be permanently engrafted upon the Judiciary system. So far there has been no serious conflict of opinion between the Court of Appeals proper and the auxiliary tribunal.

ERIE RAILWAY MATTERS.

The bill introduced today by Senator O'BRIEN to repeal the classification act is a modification, and intended to be an improvement upon the bill to effect the same object introduced by him at the beginning of the session.

NEW-YORK CONTRACTORS' BILL.

This bill, heretofore noticed in these dispatches as one of those giving increased powers to Controller GREEN, was today, on motion of Senator PALMER, recommitted to the Committee on Cities. It affects in one way or another very large interests in the City of New-York, and it is felt that it ought to be very carefully guarded. It will be maturely considered in the Committee.

REDISTRICTING THE STATE.

The census report called for by resolutions was received from the Superintendent at Washington today, and it becomes the duty of the Legislature at its present session to redistrict the State for the purpose of electing members of Congress.

THE NEW-YORK GRAND JURY BILL.

Gov. HOFFMAN has this day signed the bill legalizing the continuance of Judge BENSON'S Grand Jury. This prompt action shows that the Governor's mind, at least, was not perplexed by doubts about its constitutionality. S.

George Law's Ferries—Senator Wood—Tweed's Contested Election—Canal Board Appointments.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—The Assembly Committee on Commerce and Navigation met this evening, and heard arguments from Assemblymen BENNETT and MORTON in favor of the bill compelling GEORGE LAW to provide better accommodations for the Williamsburg ferries. It is said that lobbyists are here in the interest of LAW, to oppose the bill. The Committee postponed for one week the consideration of the bill to change the Entirant Commission.

The Investigation Committee, in the case of Senator WOOD, held a secret session, at which several witnesses were present, and cross-examined by Gen. WOOD.

A report is in circulation that TWEED will be here to-morrow to attend to his contested-seat case before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, but it is not true. He will be represented by counsel, but will not be here in person. S.

CONNECTICUT REPUBLICANS.

The Entire State Ticket Renominated by Acclamation.

Grant Delegates to the Philadelphia Convention Appointed.

Harmonious Sentiment and Decided Expressions of Sentiment—The Republicans Earnest for Grant and Certain of Victory—Details of the Doings of the Convention.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HARTFORD, Conn., Wednesday, Jan. 24, 1872.

Political action has rarely been more clearly foreshadowed and never less prearranged by wire-pullers than in that held today in the name of the Republican Party of the State of Connecticut. There was scarcely more question yesterday before the Convention met what its course would be than there is this evening, when its doings are matters of history, and my dispatches of last night have, therefore, left me little more to do than to detail what I have already sketched in outline.

UNANIMITY OF FEELING.

It must not be supposed that the work of the Convention was done for it beforehand by the office-holders of the Federal Government or by adepts in political management. That charge will doubtless be made by the enemies of President GRANT, but it will have even less foundation than the many accusations which have already become stale to the public ear. Certainly, there could hardly ever have been a Convention where there was less evidence of things being "cut and dried," where there was more general participation in the proceedings, or where there was more unanimity of sentiment, which was plainly only the reflection of equally unanimous and decided convictions among the constituents. The representatives of the Republican Party in State Convention assembled were harmonious upon the main issues presented to them, only because there was no differences on these issues among the people they represented. Political tricksters would have tried in vain to change the purpose of the Convention to present again the present incumbents of the State offices for re-election, and to make sure of a Grant delegation to the Philadelphia Convention. No representative body of a partisan character was ever less likely to be influenced by such persons. I have never seen a party Convention superior, in a personal sense, to this, and composed, as it was, almost exclusively of the intelligent farmers, artisans, and professional men; it could challenge comparison with Legislative bodies either in Connecticut or elsewhere. It had among its members very few office-holders of any kind, and less than a dozen holding office under the Federal Government. It may, of course, and possibly will, be said in certain quarters that Hartford swarmed today with the "minions" of the Administration. So it did, for I have not met nor heard of a Republican who is not a "minion" of the Administration, in the sense that he is satisfied with it, lauds it, and desires it to be continued. And not one in a hundred of these "minions" ever made, or expects to ever make a single dollar from his advocacy of the Administration, except as he makes it in common with all his fellow-citizens, in the increased prosperity of the country, as a consequence of wise and honest government. Devoted to the re-election of President GRANT only because convinced that thereby the greatest good to the greatest number can be secured, the Convention has plainly shown its predilections and at the same time its faith in the men it has chosen to represent it at Philadelphia. In a spirit of devotion to country, no less than party, it has begun and finished its labors.

As was foreshadowed in the TIMES, the Convention was organized by the selection of Hon. CHARLES PARKER, of Meriden, as temporary Chairman, who, on taking his seat, merely said a few words in acknowledgment of the honor. The usual Committees on Credentials, Permanent Organization and Resolutions were appointed, the latter being the following gentlemen, representing the Senatorial districts of the State in the order in which they are named: Dr. Grauwold, John B. Moseley, Ass Bartholomew, Wm. W. Slump, Charles H. Pond, H. Lyndie Harrison, Geo. T. Marshall, Joseph Selden, Joseph Huntington, B. W. Maples, Samuel Sherman, Ass B. Woodward, Porter B. Pack, Jeremiah Olney, Abijah Catlin, E. B. Smith, H. D. F. Smith, Benjamin Douglas, C. O. Spencer, L. S. Fuller, Dwight Marsy.

While these Committees were out, Gen. PRATT occupied the attention of the Convention by a proposition that hereafter the State Conventions should be called to meet in the afternoon of one day and sit through the next day, in order that the delegates may transact their business more deliberately; but the matter being discussed at some length and quite generally, nothing came of it in the end, and its consideration was ultimately cut short by the report of the Committees. That on Permanent Organization announced as the officers of the Convention:

President—Hon. AUGUSTUS BRANDEGEE, of New-London.

Vice-Presidents—John L. Bunce, George S. Miller, Burwell Carter, B. H. Douglass, Charles Benedict, George W. Smith, Amos B. Taylor, J. K. Adams, Gilbert Munson, James E. Dunham, John Tweedy, Dr. Belden, Albert Day, S. S. Ombden, Abijah Catlin, Eli Curtis, S. B. North, Benjamin Douglass, Cornelius Brainard, Lucius S. Fuller, Wm. M. Cummings.

Secretaries—W. T. Elmer, Lucius Brown, S. C. Dunham, S. B. West, Charles Smith, L. M. Hubbard.

MR. BRANDEGEE'S SPEECH.

On being escorted to the chair Mr. BRANDEGEE returned thanks for the honor of being called to preside over a Convention of representative Republicans of Connecticut, and promised to facilitate its business. We are again here, fellow-Republicans, to assert our faith in the principles of the Republican Party, and under our old tried and trusted leaders to form to again march on to victory. [Applause.] We are here to take a new departure. We are not assembled as another Convention will soon be, to engage in funeral services. We are here to recommend no passive policy to forty-millions of freemen, but to advocate the progressive principles of the Republican Party. We have nothing in our record to be ashamed of. Called in 1860 a new party, to take charge of the country, we found that we had a country having no navy, Army or money. Democrats had bankrupted the Treasury, scattered the navy, and seized the arsenals in eleven States. A party nurtured in statesmanship, without experience or tradition, took up the burden of Government in the face of such odds. History attests that no human organization was ever called to such responsibilities—that none ever so loyally, intelligently, consecrated itself to the maintenance of liberty among men. Looking at the record of the past, we point to these proofs of our work. What we have garnered up—a nation saved, a race liberated, treason overthrown, secession forever expunged from the American dictionary, slavery and cast—twin demons of evil—forever exorcised, the debt which was the cost of a nation's life steadily reduced, and every dollar of it, in the words of our own HAWLEY, "as sacred as a soldier's grave." [applause.] States reconstructed, a flag, with a star for every State and a State for every star, floating over a free country, these are the works of the Republican Party. Peace and prosperity at home—peace, with respect, abroad. These are the fruits of Republican government, and today we pledge ourselves anew to administer this Government, which we have saved, in the interests of peace, and liberty, and honesty, and good government. We are here to maintain that all men shall ever remain free and equal. Promising this, we invite the cooperation of all friends of temperance, of true, of liberty and law, to the only party able and willing to administer rightly a free government, and upon our cause we invoke the blessing of Almighty God.

THE NOMINATIONS.

This address was received with prolonged applause, and when it had subsided Capt. DUNHAM, of Bridgeport, with a few remarks concerning the unanimity of sentiment among the Republicans of the State, which demanded that course, moved that the present incumbents of the State offices be nominated for re-election by acclamation. Mr. CARPENTER, of Putnam, suggested that it might be well, merely for the sake of appearance, to have an informal ballot, but the Convention was not in the mood, and the motion of Capt. DUNHAM was carried without a dissenting voice. The candidates thus put in the field were:

For Governor, MARSHALL JEWELL, of Hartford.

Lieutenant-Governor, MORRIS TYLER, of New-Haven.

Secretary of State, HIRAM APPERSON, of Groton.

Treasurer, DAVID P. NICHOLS, of Danbury.

Comptroller, JAMES W. MANNING, of Putnam.

A committee was appointed to inform Gov. JEWELL of his nomination, and request his presence in the Convention.

DELEGATES TO THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Meantime the delegates proceeded to the next important business, in the selection of the delegates to speak for Connecticut in the National Republican Convention, to be held at Philadelphia in June next. After considerable discussion, it was determined that those for the State at large should be selected by the whole Convention by ballot, and of those for the Congressional Districts, one should be named by each county. The delegates at large, it was also decided should be taken one from each of the four Congressional Districts and the First District being called Gen. JOSEPH R. HAWLEY was named. By unanimous consent and with the most decided marks of the universal esteem in which Gen. HAWLEY is held by the Republicans of the State the rule was suspended and he was elected by acclamation. For the Second District it was moved that WM. FITCH be elected in the same way, but it was moved to amend by substituting the name of BARTLETT BENT. It was objected in Mr. BENT'S case, that he held a Federal office, being postmaster at Middletown, but during the proceedings it was urged upon the Convention by Mr. ELMER and others that the fact was no reason why he should be shelved in a Republican constitution. As Chairman of the State Committee he had worked long, seriously and faithfully for the party, and it was due to him that the party should make him some reward. It was true the Government had shown confidence in him, but it was senseless to urge that for that reason the people must decline to put faith in him. In the end two ballots were taken, the first being: BENT, 115; CHARLES PARKER, 121; WM. FITCH 47; and some scattering; the second ballot was: BENT, 206; and PARKER, 149; whereupon Mr. BENT was declared duly elected as delegate at large from the Second District. It being decided that the two remaining delegates at large should be named by the delegates from the districts, the Convention adjourned for dinner.

Upon re-assembling, the delegates to the National Convention were speedily decided upon, and the list as formally declared, is as follows:

AT LARGE.

Joseph R. Hawley, Bartlett Bent, Sabin L. Sayles and John Tweedy.

DISTRICT DELEGATES.

James D. Fray, of Hartford; Charles Parker, of New-Haven; Daniel Chadwick, of New-London; Joseph F. Calhoun, of Litchfield; Jared E. Benfield, of Middlesex; Lucius S. Fuller, of Tolland; Israel M. Bullock, of Fairfield; George S. Moulton, of Windham.

Upon motion of Capt. DUNHAM, it was ordered that whatever vacancies may occur in the delegation shall be filled only by a majority vote of the whole delegation, it being intended by this action to prevent any delegate from appointing a substitute for himself. Capt. DUNHAM said it was known that this delegation was all right, and when he casually mentioned some of them as being sure for GRANT, the Convention cheered vociferously.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

The next business was the report of the Committee on Resolutions, presented by Hon. ARA B. WOODWARD, of Norwalk, as follows:

The Republicans of Connecticut, in State Convention assembled, declare as follows:

1. We again express our cordial adherence to the doctrines and principles of the Republican Party as enunciated in our previous statements and in the national platforms, and we reflect with increasing pride upon its wonderful work. It proved that a free Government, based on the will and affections of a free people, is the strongest and best form of government. It suppressed a great rebellion, freed millions of laborers, established equal rights, perfected the national constitution and justified the Declaration of Independence. By the great reduction of the army and navy, the party proved that it had neither desire nor expectation of war. Having incurred a great debt for the best reasons a nation ever gave, it rapidly began an immediate reduction of that debt; yet having cut down expenses, it has been nearly cutting down taxation. Notwithstanding marvelous sacrifices of men and money, the nation has steadily grown in wealth and population.

2. During the existing Administration the debt has been reduced nearly $200,000,000; peace and order have made great progress in the lately rebellious regions; a new policy toward the Indians has been adopted, marked by firmness, justice and good faith; the right of all, especially the poor and friendless, of whatever race or wherever found, have been scrupulously protected; a self-respecting yet peaceable policy has been pursued toward all the world, and our controversy with Great Britain has been treated in a manner greatly creditable to both nations.

3. That we have undiminished confidence in the patriotism, integrity and ability of President GRANT, and for the great and good work done in the country's behalf we heartily thank him and his Cabinet and the two Houses of Congress. [Great applause.]

4. The future must be as memorable as the past. To deserve and keep its lead of the world the Republican Party must be free to receive and criticise, and utterly without fear, form a partiality in attacking all fraud, dishonor and corruption—legislative, executive or judicial, in nation or State. We demand honest money, and honesty in our political affairs, and rejoice at the brightening prospects of a thorough reform of the civil service. For the President's efforts and pledges in this matter we tender him our cordial thanks, and therein we pledge him our enthusiastic, unwavering support. [Applause.]

5. In national affairs we favor a large reduction of taxation, economical study and labor to bring about a resumption of specie payments, that the evils of a depreciated currency may be removed, and the best possible measures of value furnished us; retaining only sufficient to raise the needed revenue, we would have it carefully adjusted to foster American industry, looking rather to interests widely extended than to merely local and limited pursuits; a perfected system of national banks, with abundant security to the bill-holder, and inflexible and permanent laws for prompt redemption; the abolition of the franking privilege.

6. The public lands shall no more be granted to corporations, but given in limited quantities to actual settlers. [Applause.]

7. For fifteen years the Republican Party has controlled the Legislature of Connecticut. Let the record show whether it is the friend or the enemy of peace, law, order, charity, temperance, industry, education, and a fair field for all men. For that it was created. What it has done for all it will do—only better. To any measure that as mature deliberation promises to aid the interests of temperance, education and labor, we will give our warm support.

8. We thank our Republican friends of the General Assembly for its firm execution of a constitutional process for correcting infamous election frauds last year. To the best of its ability the Republican Party saw to it that no contested voter in the House other was counted once and no more. The happy ruin of the Tammany Ring encourages us to believe that the work will be easier hereafter. [Applause.]

9. Thanks to the fearless duties of counsel and citizens in appearing before Legislative committees and urging useless and expensive laws, there have grown up corrupt and dangerous processes in the lobby which call for renewed vigilance in Legislators and a higher tone of public sentiment.

10. That it is the duty of the State to be vigilant in the protection of the rights and interests of the people against the potent wealth and skill of the lobby in holding railroads entirely to the responsibilities and duties contemplated in their charters.

11. While recognizing the fundamental principles which have brought us through the crisis to our country and believing that only republican institutions exist on this continent, we urge our representatives in Congress to keep before them the great ideas of liberty and fraternity which have made us identified with our great party of progress from its birth, and are certainly desire to extend all sympathy and aid consistent with our ability, to other nations and peoples struggling to be free.

12. We unquestionably approve the administration of Gov. JEWELL and his associates, of which we give the highest evidence in our power by unanimously recommending them for re-election, and pledging our utmost effort to their cause.

These resolutions were unanimously adopted with great applause, and after the appointment of the State Central Committee and the transaction of some other routine business, the Convention adjourned sine die.

As foreshadowed in my dispatch last night, no resolution instructing the delegates to Philadelphia was adopted, but the Convention took care that no one should be ashamed to speak for Connecticut in that body who is not a pronounced, unfaltering advocate of the nomination of President GRANT for a second term. The delegation is avowedly a Grant delegation, and in being such, it truly represents the Republican Party of Connecticut. E. C.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Action of the House on the Appropriation Bill.

Motion for the Adjournment of Congress in May.

Petition for Female Suffrage—Sale of United States Arms—Reports from the Departments—Miscellaneous Matters.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—It is reported today that the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate have requested the President to withdraw the name of CHARLES HALE, nominated to be Assistant Secretary of State. However this may be, it is not true that the Committee have decided to report against him, nor is the other statement true, that Mr. HALE was removed from his former position as Consul-General to Egypt on charges affecting his personal character. He resigned with no charge on record against him. The warfare waged against Mr. HALE is of a very peculiar character. It originates with a Levantine Greek, named D'AIVERS, well known in Washington, who has pursued Mr. HALE for years in pamphlets and in other documents, with charges that have been repeatedly exploded. His wrath, which takes a very low and malicious form, has its foundation in the rejection, first by Mr. SEWARD, and then by Mr. FISH, of certain claims of alleged naturalized citizens at Alexandria, Egypt, and also in the carrying out by Mr. HALE of certain instructions, as Consul-General, received from Mr. SEWARD, which were exceedingly distasteful to D'AIVERS, who had originally gone out to Alexandria as clerk to Consul-General THAYER, and who, on the latter's retirement, was by him made Vice-Consul, which action the State Department repudiated, as well as all the foolish and disreputable actions of which D'AIVERS had been guilty during his unauthorized incumbency. When he was dismissed he brought charges against Mr. HALE of receiving a large sum of money for doing that which he was instructed to do by the State Department. The history of this old affair is very long and disgusting, and is one of the meanest exhibitions of spite and revenge which the lobbies of Washington have latterly furnished.

WORK ON THE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The progress made in the House today on the Legislative Appropriation bill was remarkable. Nearly half the bill was considered and passed without an amendment in opposition to the Committee's action. The Carson City Mint appropriation, which was originally stricken out, was restored by the Committee today, though the increased appropriation asked therefor was refused.

AID FOR CHICAGO.

The amnesty discussion was allowed to drop out of sight by the Senate entirely today, and the whole day after 1 o'clock was taken up with the bill for the relief of the Chicago sufferers by a drawback of duties on building materials, and a delay in the collection of taxes assessed by the Government. The discussion became decidely warm, especially between Mr. LOGAN and the two Senators from Michigan, who wanted to extend the relief granted by the bill to the sufferers by the fires in Michigan, as did also Mr. CARPENTER to the Peshtigo people. The seeming reason of opposition was that Michigan, being one of the great lumber-producing States, and largely supplying the Chicago market, was likely to feel the remission of duties on that article and indirectly contribute more than her just proportion to the rebuilding of Chicago. Several Senators favored a direct appropriation which would distribute the contribution more equally and equitably over the whole country than the bill proposed would do. The amendments were all defeated except those proposed by the Finance Committee, and the bill was passed. Amnesty was left just as it stood last night, to come up again to-morrow, with Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, entitled to the floor. A curious incident of the debate today was the quoting of the record of the discussion in the Senate on a bill of relief for Portland when that city was burned, which showed that Mr. TRUMBULL steadily opposed any action by Congress on that occasion upon general principles, though now he is one of the most earnest in appeals for Chicago.

INFORMATION CONCERNING DEFAULTERS.

Mr. CONKLING offered, in the Senate today, a resolution calling upon the President to furnish Congress with a statement of the public expenditures, the number of defaulters, the amounts lost by defalcation and embezzlement, or the unfaithfulness of public officers, the names of the defaulters who had been punished, the suits brought and now pending, when and by whom the defaulting officers were appointed, the time to extend back to March 4, 1869. This information, when made up from the records of the Departments, will show to what Administration the recently discovered defalcations are chargeable, and will fully substantiate the facts recently set forth in the TIMES, which have attracted much attention here.

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.

Mr. MORTON secured a place in the morning hour of the Senate for discussion and action upon the resolution of adjournment of Congress in May, and when there is any time left in the morning hour, after the morning business, it will be given to discussion on this resolution till a vote is secured. His motion to take up the resolution this morning was opposed by Mr. SUMNER in the first instance, and after they came into the Senate by Mr. TRUMBULL and Mr. SCHURZ. It was taken up by a vote of thirty-four to seventeen, which would indicate that it was the purpose of the majority to pass the resolution, which has now been changed to fix upon Wednesday, the 29th of May, instead of the third Monday. Among the Republicans voting against the resolution were SHERMAN, SUMNER, TRUMBULL and SCHURZ. The Democrats, with one or two exceptions, voted the same way. It is altogether likely that the desire to have an adjournment before the Philadelphia Convention will prevail. Mr. SUMNER'S determination to delay everything with his civil rights discussion, and Mr. SCHURZ'S amendment for a proviso that all things which he thinks desirable shall be done before adjournment, are likely to delay action on the resolution for some time, perhaps weeks.

REPORT ON THE POST-ROUTE CONTRACTS.

The Postmaster-General today sent to the House for transmission to the Committee on Post-offices and Post-roads a large number of important papers bearing upon the post-route contract investigation, which has just begun. These documents were called for by the resolutions of Messrs. WELLS and VAN TRUMP, on the 15th and 20th of December last. They include a statement of mail routes on which, during the years 1870 and 1871, mail service other than by railroad and steam-boat was increased above the amount originally advertised for in the States of Texas, Arkansas, and Oregon, and in the several Territories, with the names of the contractors, the amounts of compensation paid for the original service, and the amounts paid for the increased service, and also the names of the parties on whose recommendation the increased service was ordered. Also, copies of the several opinions of the Attorney-General, as to the true interpretation of the laws bearing on the subject of making temporary contracts for the transportation of the mails. Letters are also submitted from Messrs. CHILDS and DAVIS, of the Contract Office, one of whom has been in the Department for forty years, and the other for nineteen years, showing what the usage of the Department has been under the laws requiring contracts to be let to the lowest bidders, and as to the practice in case of the failure of accepted bidders. Also a statement showing the names of the several bidders, and the sums of their bids under the advertisement of September, 1870, on routes let to bidders who failed to perform the required service. Various other papers, furnishing the fullest information on this subject, statistical or otherwise, are also submitted.

SALE OF ARMS BY THE GOVERNMENT.

The Secretary of War today sent to the House a long and very full statement of all the sales of arms and war material by the Government from the close of the war to the present time. The amount covered is immense, amounting to many millions of dollars. From this document Senator SCHURZ and others who have been smelling around lately to see if they couldn't get another chance to defame the Administration, may learn who bought the arms, and possibly they may also discover where the great swindles, which the French Government is said to have suffered, come in. This Government never knowingly sold to the agents of either France or Germany. On this point Gen. DYER, Chief of Ordnance, in his letter to the Secretary of War, which is transmitted, says:

"It has been the practice to entertain any and all applications to buy from individuals, unless some reason for declining was known to this Department. For example, about half an hour before the time fixed for opening the bids for the purchase of Springfield and Enfield muskets, in October, 1870, I was shown a dispatch from a member of the house of E. REMINGTON & SONS, stating that they were agents of the French Government and authorized to purchase arms for it. I postponed the opening of the bids and immediately showed the dispatch to you, and you promptly directed me to suspend the sale and not to entertain any bid from E. REMINGTON & SONS for arms, &c."

THE WOMAN SUFFRAGE QUESTION IN THE HOUSE.

The only exciting incident in the House was the presentation by Gen. BUTLER of the memorial of 38,600 women asking Congress to pass a law declaratory of woman's right to vote under the Amendments. It was in a huge roll, tied with a blue ribbon, and staggered BUTLER when he attempted to hold it aloft for all to see. He accompanied it with a speech which shed no new light upon the subject, but showed him to be among those who believe that women are already voters under the Constitution. BUTLER asked the House to consider the matter seriously, but upon Mr. ELDRIDGE'S asking that the names be read, the House went off into a roar.

STATEMENT OF THE FREEDMEN'S BUREAU ACCOUNTS.

Gen. HOWARD has submitted to the Secretary of War a full statement of the account of the bonds purchased by Gen. BALLOCH, late disbursing officer of the Freedmen's Bureau, and the interest thereon, the latter of which Gen. BALLOCH has been charged with improperly using for his personal benefit. This statement shows that whatever may be the gravity of his action in converting his balances into bonds, he has not profited personally by the transaction in the slightest degree. The bonds, $720,000, cost in March, 1871, less accrued interest, $272,831 20, and were sold, less accrued interest, for $214,516 13, the profit of $695 22 going to account of the Government. The bonds earned interest in the meantime to the amount of $19,659 31. This amount has been wholly accounted for as follows: Paid into the Treasury by Gen. HOWARD, $16,336 41; vouchers, as per account rendered to Third Auditor, $2,322 90. This last item represents the payments made by Gen. BALLOCH out of the interest to the legitimate claimants who appeared after the fraudulent claimants had been paid. If the accounting officer declines to pass these vouchers, then Gen. BALLOCH is holden for the sum, and he or his bondsmen will have to make it up. So far as the intent to profit personally by the transaction is concerned, there is no evidence of it.

FALSE TESTIMONY CONCERNING REVENUE FRAUDS.

The history of Mr. CASSELLY'S dubious witness, BERNARD HESS, grows worse and worse the more his memory is revived here. He swears that he sent proofs of BAILEY'S defalcation to Mr. DELANO on the 7th of March, 1869, whereas, Mr. DELANO did not enter office until the 11th of March, 1869. There is no record of any proofs of defalcation against BAILEY or any other officer, submitted by HESS, and it was and still is a strict rule of the Department that no communication shall be returned to the writer. After Mr. DELANO came into office this man frequently sent long rambling letters charging fraud against subordinate revenue officers in the most general terms, never submitting any proofs but his own loose and reckless statements. It was always observed that soon after making one of those reports he would apply for an office, either by letter or in person.

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE.

The Congressional Committee's Work Yesterday.

An Importer's Experiences and Opinions—Allen N. Lect and Col. Lect Contradict Each Other—Phelps, Dodge & Co.'s Custom-House Clerk.

The testimony yesterday before the Senate Committee on Retrenchment, was a curious blending of the serious and the farcical,—the results of business experiences and the gatherings of industrious listeners to gossip and rumor. The first witness called was BENJAMIN H. HUTTON, importer of foreign goods. He did not know of any fraudulent transactions connected with the General Order system, nor of any Custom-house official who received money dishonestly. He considered the charges on General Order a serious abuse, and believed it to be six times greater than in former years. He had no doubt that more was charged for carriage than is paid to the cartmen, but this opinion was based on no certain knowledge. The increase began in 1861, and the charges had reached their maximum before Mr. DRAPER's time, when they reached as high as $3 per package. They are now $1.75. In his private business he pays forty cents a package. Mr. HUTTON thought that the Government should establish bonded warehouses, and, in absence of this system, each line of steamers should be allowed to have bonded warehouses. He had been told by a person, who had heard it from a man who said he knew, that those in charge of General Order business paid a portion of the profits to outside parties, and that this was the cause of the higher charges. There have been better men in the Custom-house, Mr. HUTTON thinks, for the past six or seven years than we had ever before known. Abuses have been corrected and business conducted on better principles. Under Collector SMITH an attempt was made to seize his books, and he had formed the opinion that the right of search and seizure ought not to be in the hands of men who were pecuniarly interested in the result.

P. M. MOORE, Custom-house clerk for the firm of PHELPS, DODGE & CO., was decidedly of the opinion that the workings of the General Order system are not conducive to the benefit of the commerce of the port and the consumers. The rates of charges are too high. He was acquainted with the system when the steam-ship companies had the business, but didn't know how the rates compared, as only in two instances had goods of his firm been sent to LEET & CO.'s stores. Mr. GRINNELL when Collector, offered him and others that the General Order privilege by a person high in Federal office. He had been told this by Mr. GRINNELL and by the man who made the offer. He believed that he spoke in the interest of every merchant when he said that the entire system should be changed.

A. LEET was one of the witnesses suggested by Mr. WHITELAW REID. He said that the assertion that Col. LEET had told him that he made enormous amounts of money had been distorted in transmission through Mr. SHARKE and Mr. REID. He had simply said that such was the case, and he knew that it was true because he had heard so. He described his first meeting with Col. LEET in Philadelphia, about twelve years ago, when the latter called on him to claim relationship. Witness described several subsequent meetings, and gave many details in regard to his history. An article written by him for the Tribune was handed to Senator HOWE as true in all its parts, but when examined in reference to details they were found to be stated "on information and belief."

Col. GEO. E. LEET, being recalled, denied having ever seen his pretended cousin until yesterday. He was not in Philadelphia in 1859, 1860 or 1861, and every incident related by the former witness, so far as they related to him, was false.

JOHN DE BROOT, clerk of A. T. STEWART & CO., testified to an agreement with LEET & CO., by which their charges do not exceed $1.75 per package. An overcharge in one case was refunded on application.

J. J. ROBERT, an importer of watches, gave evidence in regard to a case of watches which was lost after being taken into the custody of the cartman, and for which he could obtain no return. Neither the cartman nor his employers could be reached, and the bonds were worthless.

WM. BUCHANAN, importer of spinning-machinery, had been charged $263 by LEET & CO. for cartage and storage of thirty cases. The vessel arrived Saturday morning and he had his permit on the spot by 1 o'clock; but he found them stowing the goods on General Order carts. Ten of the cases were not put into the store, but were exposed to the rain on the side walks until Monday morning, when he removed them all. He thought he had been wronged both by the haste in the removal from the wharf and by the excessive charge.

MORNING SESSION.

A correspondence between JOHN C. HOOPER, Secretary of the National Revenue Reform Association, and the Secretary of the Treasury, was put in. Mr. HOOPER's letter drew attention, in a general way, to the subject of competition among the inspectors for the examination of baggage on foreign steamers, and alleged fraudulent acts of Custom-house brokers, charging that they improperly passed baggage for bribes. The letter from the Secretary of the Treasury stated that he had appointed a gentleman to investigate the grievances complained of, and that he was instituting measures to break up the system.

The correspondence between Mr. KEMBLE and the Secretary of the Treasury, in reference to the charges made on two pieces of silk, was ordered to be printed.

AN IMPORTER'S TESTIMONY.

BENJAMIN H. HUTTON, an importer of foreign goods, testified, on being examined by the Chairman, that he had not encountered any embarrassment recently in getting goods through the Custom-house; he knew of no one in the Custom-house receiving money illegally. He considered the charges for the General Order system higher than they should be; he had complained of the charges, and got no redress. The General Order charges ten years ago were only one-third of what they are now. He believed that more was charged for carriage than was paid to the cartmen, but of this he had no proof. The charges had increased since 1861, and in 1861 they were very exorbitant. Mr. DRAPER reduced the charges when he came into office. He considered sixty cents per package would be a fair charge. He had paid under protest $10 50 for seven packages; he did not contest the legality of the charge, as the expense of a lawsuit would be too great. The charges under Mr. DRAPER were $1 25, but LEET & STOCKING raised them to $1 75; sometimes, however, they would reduce them to $1 50.

By Senator Pratt—You say LEET & Co. should sit in judgment on the charges of the car-men, and if they deem them excessive they should cut them down? A.—They should have no power in the matter except under the authority of law; the rates should be regulated by the Collector.

Q.—Who should pay them. A.—Leet & Co.

Q.—Do you think, suppose the charges, with the regulation charges and see that they are not excessive? A.—That is my opinion, Sir.

Senator Bayard—You pay yourself $1 for three or four packages from Jersey to New-York? A.—Yes, Sir. The legal load takes six or eight French packages. You could put in twenty or thirty packages according to the size.

Q.—Do you know of any advantage in the way of security to the Government by the present system? A.—It is a very bad system.

Q.—Do you know of any advantage arising from giving the different lines of steam-ships a General Order store in connection with their docks? A.—It would be much better than the present system, which is the worst that possibly could be. The Government should have its own public stores, and make its charges accordingly. The business should not be a reward for political or other services whatever. If the Government should establish bonded warehouses which should be also General Order stores that would be the system. In the absence of that the best system would be the establishment of bonded warehouses by the different lines of steamers.

Q.—Would not the wholesome effect of competition give increased facilities and accommodation? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Your business firm is one of the oldest in the City? A.—Yes, Sir. I speak of my experience since 1824. As far back as that there was no charge for storage. The rates were about eighteen cents.

Q.—It is claimed that by reason of the percentage of the expenses that the present Administration is an economical one—is that a proper test? A.—No, Sir. The percentage depends upon the importation and the importation is governed by circumstances.

Q.—Have the importations increased in the last two or three years? A.—Yes, Sir. That ought to entail a reduction of the percentage. With a reduced tariff the percentage would be higher.

Q.—State the grounds upon which you consider the present Customs system one expensive to the Government and the merchant? A.—We have to pay money unnecessarily. We have to pay for the stamp on the invoice, so much for an order, so much for a bond, and so much for an affidavit. The charges have grown up from year to year to such an extent that they are for a serious tax on the importer. I never knew it was permitted by law. I regard the charges for cartage under the General Order system a very serious abuse.

Senator Bayard—What do you know of the abstraction of articles of goods from the packages in the Government custody? A.—There have not been any outstanding rumors. Formerly it happened occasionally, and when a remonstrance was made an effort was made to suppress it. There has been a reduction of the General Order charges lately. I saw charges for packages at $1 25. This occurred within two or three months. I know that LEET & Co. maintained higher charges than those that preceded them, contrary to remonstrance. I don't believe there was any detriment to commerce by reason of having some of our steamship lines owned by foreigners. I think the objection was a very foolish one.

By Senator Casserly—Do you know that the parties having charge of the General Order business put a portion of the receipts to persons not named? A.—I have heard of it, Sir.

Q.—Did you hear it from a person who knew? A.—I heard it from a person who was told it by a person who knew, and that that was the reason of the high charges.

Q.—Was that paid to a considerable extent? A.—I have been led to understand so, Sir.

Q.—You consider they charge the merchants more than they have a right to, and more than they pay the carmen? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—And the difference must be a profit to the parties? A.—Yes.

Senator Pratt—I ask you to give me the names of the parties who said LEET & CO. divided the profits with outside parties? A.—I did not refer to LEET & Co.

Q.—To their predecessors? A.—I was told it confidentially, and I am not at liberty to mention it.

Q.—Have you any reason to suppose that LEET & STOCKING divide their receipts with outside parties? A.—I have not, Sir.

[Witness then went on to show that LEET & STOCKING's charges are one-third higher than their predecessors.]

Senator Pratt—What was the usual charge for cartage from the public store to the General Order store—was it not $1? A.—No, Sir, only fifty cents. I believe it was under Mr. GRINNELL's administration the 1,200 pounds regulation was established, and that was a very memorable remonstrance. I am not able to explain how packages were transferred from the public to the General Order store. If it was a bonded warehouse I could understand it. The delays in receiving goods sometimes extended over two or three days. I did not go there myself, but took the statement of my cartman on the subject.

Q.—In your former evidence you stated that there were better men in the Custom-house for the last six years than there was in all your experience, and that many abuses were corrected. Do you still adhere to that opinion? A.—It was correct then, Sir, and I have no reason to change it.

By the Chairman—What would be the effect on the commerce if the General Order stores were increased and competition established? A.—The charges would be lower and business would be benefited; the best system that could be devised would be to have the Government establish a particular rate and regulate the whole General Order system; all the steam-ship lines would be glad to have the privilege of a General Order of its own; I don't see how it could be an injury to the interests of the Government; it would be less advantageous than the other system you referred to; in the General Order store they charge a month's rate on the goods being entered, and charge according to time of stowage.

Q.—Were your books ever seized? A.—No, Sir; the Collector sent for them once, and the injury to me was very serious; it checked the business for a considerable time.

Q.—Do you think this power invested in the Collector is exercised wisely? A.—I think without a very well-founded suspicion of fraud it is very injurious; if the charge is sustained the effect would be beneficial to the collection of the revenue and the interest of trade generally. The law is a proper one if properly exercised and if there was no inducement to abuse it.

Q.—Are the abuses so great as to necessitate a repeal of the law? A.—If continued it would be.

Q.—Under the practice new books or papers have not been seized recently except by the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the District Attorney and the Collector, would you suggest any better safeguard? A.—That would be a great improvement on the practice which existed, though I believe it was conducted more loosely.

By Senator Bayard—Was any compromise offered you, or any proposed settlement, when your books were seized? A.—I don't know that any proposition of that kind was made, but I know no compromise was made. I insisted on a total relinquishment of the charge, which was subsequently abandoned on the evidence I produced. I have heard of very frequent compromises being made, under threats of prosecution, I can't speak from personal information on this subject. Merchants would not be likely to give publicity to a compromise if they were guilty. If they were innocent, they would feel sensitive over it, and not be likely to make it known.

By Senator Casserly—Do you think the Chamber of Commerce ought to regulate the charges in the General Order and other stores? A.—I think they should have something to say to it.

Senator Stuart—You had no difficulty concerning your books since the seizure you refer to? A.—Not since nor before.

Q.—What do you think of the system of having spies in the service? A.—To give you a frank opinion, I think it is a disgrace to the Government. These men are influenced by the amount of money they receive, and frequently trump up charges without any foundation for them. I think they are valuable in the detection of smuggling. These men, however, are changed. To-morrow they may turn out their experts and put in new men, who would cause us an immensity of trouble.

By Senator Pratt—Is it not to the interest of the honest merchant that the strictest letter of the law should be observed in regard to dishonest importers? A.—In the abstract, this principle is correct; I would not consider the law a hardship against a dishonest importer where the charge was sustained; I believe that a man's place of business is his castle, and a seizure should not be made without proper foundation and a hope of success. If the system could be examined I believe it would shield the honest man, it would also shield the dishonest importer.

Mr. TILLOTSON, a previous witness, here changed the name of the steamer mentioned by him from the City of Washington to the City of New-York.

PHELPS, DODGE & CO'S CUSTOMS CLERK.

PETER N. MOORE was sworn and examined by Senator HOWE: I have been in the house of PHELPS, DODGE & CO. for twenty-six years. I have attended to the supervision of duties levied on importations, &c. The firm is one of the largest in the City in its line. The workings of the system of the General Order are not conducive to the interest of commerce. I speak of the manner in which it is conducted at the present day. The rates, compared with rates under former systems, are three or four times greater. The effect in business where the margin of profit is small of a small increase in the charges made at the port, would drive business altogether from the port. I was approached by a gentleman from Baltimore recently, and he said that since the commencement of this investigation, the General Order people had got the distemper, and a happy reaction was beginning to set in in favor of the merchants. I would suggest that the abuses be stopped there as well as elsewhere. I know a gentleman of high rank under the Government, who went and offered Mr. GRINNELL a check for $50,000, for the General Order business. The gentlemen himself told me, Mr. GRINNELL politely requested the gentleman to leave the office.

Senator HOWE—Do you believe the profits of the General Order business are between $200,000 and $300,000 a year. I am totally opposed to the General Order system. I would let every line of steamers have its own General Order system, with moderate charges, just paying expenses.

ALLAN N. LEET, TRIBUNE REPORTER.

On his examination a few days ago, Col. LEET was asked if he was acquainted with a Mr. LEET in the Tribune office, and he answered in the negative. Yesterday ALLAN N. LEET, Tribune reporter, who was the next witness, testified that while he was in Philadelphia, in 1860, at a hotel, a card was sent up to him with the name "G. K. LEET;" Col. LEET came up and introduced himself, and said they must be cousins; after returning to New-York he received a letter from Col. LEET, as his father and mother could testify; he visited Col. LEET subsequently a second time; saw him five months ago to ask for employment for his brother-in-law; this was subsequent to an investigation witness was making into frauds in the Custom-house; on that occasion Col. LEET admitted that there were irregularities in the Custom-house, but said they were unavoidable and the same as they always were. A short time ago witness mentioned to Mr. SHARKE, City Editor of the Tribune, that he had the conversation referred to with Col. LEET. In the Tribune of Tuesday was an article on the exactions of LEET & CO., which I wrote. My authority for the statement relative to the carmen is E. C. JOHNSON & CO., bonded warehousemen, Nos. 6 and 8 Bridge-street.

In reply to Senator HOWE, the witness went over the whole ground of his alleged acquaintance and interview with Col. LEET. He said the Colonel took a great interest in the family history, and showed him a book with the family traced down from Gov. LEET, who was Colonial Governor of New-Haven before the Revolution. He continued: He said: Since I called upon Col. LEET in 1870, he was in one or two businesses. He was clerk in the freight department of the New-Jersey Railroad at Newark. He was there in the month of July, 1871, to my certain knowledge. At a certain time in that month he and I went together on a particular business. I am under the impression he was kept there at from $60 to $100 a month. I am not able to say how long he continued in that business. I left Newark in the latter part of July. From the month of July, 1870, to four or five months ago, I did not renew my application to Col. LEET for employment. I had a conversation with him in reference to the Customs-house, and said that I knew of certain abstractions in the Custom-house. I told him I had been engaged in hunting up and investigating these matters, and he said it was a very small matter for a man to be engaged in, and that he didn't want to have anything to do with him. I don't know whether I said Mr. SHARKE or not, but the relationship which I supposed existed between us.

Q.—You state in this article that the carmen of LEET & Co. have to pay from fifteen to thirty per cent for the privilege—is that true? A.—From information and belief.

Senator Casserly—Col. LEET said in his testimony that he knew no person named LEET in the Tribune. Did you have these conversations referred to during the past few months? A.—Yes, Sir. We casually referred to the irregularities in the Custom-house, and he said they were no worse now than in former Administrations.

COL. LEET WAS RECALLED.

Col. LEET was recalled, and examined by Mr. HOWE.

Q.—Have you had the less witness before? A.—I never saw him before to my knowledge. This man stated he did not visit the last four or five months on application to me for a situation for his brother-in-law.

Q.—Were you in Philadelphia at any time in 1859, 1860 or 1861? A.—I was not in Philadelphia since 1854.

Q.—Do you recollect calling upon a gentleman named LEET, in the Continental Hotel, in Philadelphia, inquiring his pedigree, and comparing his list with yours? A.—I never did.

Q.—Do you recollect at any time, in any hotel, in any city, exhibiting to any person by the name of LEET a book containing the pedigree of your family? A.—I never had a book of such a character.

To Senator Casserly—I never before saw this man to my knowledge. I had no conversation with him such as he refers to, and no application from him, either orally or in writing, asking a position for his brother-in-law.

OATH OF MR. STEWART'S CLERKS.

JOHN DEBROOT, a clerk in the employ of A. T. STEWART & CO., testified that bills were presented by LEET & CO. for $1 a package; the charge was protested against, and they were reduced to $1.75; since when the charges have been kept to this rate, without any exception; I understand the arrangement was made with Mr. VAN SAUN, in December, 1869.

A WATCH IMPORTER.

J. J. ROBERT, an importer of watches, testified: About twelve months ago I paid duties on a case of watches received from Switzerland; the goods were not delivered to me, and I applied to the Custom-house for redress; I was there referred to the carman, but, being unable to obtain any satisfaction, I reported the matter at Washington. The value of the goods was about $2,000. I paid $287 in gold duty upon them. The only person who seemed sorry for my loss was Mr. PATTERSON, who employed the carman; but he did not refund me the money. I was never indemnified for my loss.

To Senator Pratt—The goods were given to the carman, and taken to the public stores, and thence, I believe, to the Barge Office. The manifest of the vessel will show that the goods were delivered on the dock. I have never instituted a suit against Mr. PATTERSON, but I have commenced one against Mr. MURRAY for taking insufficient bonds from the district carmen.

Senator Bayard—Where did you find the bond? A.—I think it was in what was called the Cartage bureau. At first they refused to let me take a copy of it, and I went to see the Collector. I had a good deal of difficulty in seeing him, as he was surrounded by politicians; but finally a clerk gave me the bond to copy. The names of the persons on the bond were CRANE and HOFFMAN. The surety was Mr. H. O. WELLS. I understood from the carman that Mr. HOFFMAN was a myth.

A TOBACCO MANUFACTURER.

JAMES WILLIAM BUCHANAN, manufacturer of tobacco, produced a bill dated June 12, 1871, for $258 25, for goods landed June 10, and which were taken by General Order to-day. The goods were not docked at all, but landed into the General Order store. He had his permit about one o'clock the day the vessel discharged, and was told they had been discharging since morning and were now carried on the carts to the General Order stores.

[A report of the proceedings of the evening session of the Committee will be found elsewhere.]

THE COST OF LIVING.

"Epicure's" Substitute for Meat for Breakfast.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

My wife was so pleased at the prompt response to offer to furnish the recipe for "scrapple," that she sat down and wrote it out immediately after I read the requests for it by your two correspondents, which was while I was eating an excellent breakfast, consisting of home-made bread, coffee, and the aforesaid scrapple. I her to add, that whoever tries the recipe will not get discouraged if they should not succeed on the first attempt, as a great deal depends on having the right proportions of the ingredients, and in the article being tried very brown and crisp. EPICURE.

HOW TO MAKE SCRAPPLE.

Get a young pig's head (fresh) weighing five or six pounds, which can be bought for twenty-five or thirty cents—"one from the country preferred." Clean it well, cutting off the ears to enable you to clean them well inside. (Get the butcher to take out the eyes and teeth when you buy it.) Put the head in two gallons and a half of cold water. Let it boil until the bones can be easily separated from the meat. Chop the meat very fine, put it back into the liquor it has been boiled in, and season with pepper, salt, thyme, sage and sweet marjoram. (Don't put too much of the herbs.) Then take equal parts of buckwheat and corn-meal, and stir in until the compound is of such a consistency as to keep it off the fire while thickening, to prevent it getting lumpy. Then let it boil for about fifteen or twenty minutes, stirring it to prevent burning. Turn it into pans to cool. Cut into thin slices, and fry brown as you want to use it.

The cost will be about fifty cents. For that sum my family of seven persons have plenty for breakfast every day for a week.

As my husband is, as he calls himself, somewhat of an epicure, and decidedly objects to an uninterrupted course of beefsteaks and chops, which mainly comprise the range of Bridget's ability in the breakfast line, I give several domestic dishes, the result of a long experience in housekeeping, which I will be happy to furnish at some future time, as I am afraid I have already trespassed too much on your valuable space.

THE "GOOD LADY" OF THE HOUSE.

How One Bachelor Lives.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I send you a short account of my method of living, trusting that it may be of some service to those who are seeking to solve the problem of how to live in this City on a small income. My salary is $1,200 per annum, out of which I must provide for my own wants and for those of an adopted son, a lad of about fourteen. I am in delicate health, have certain rates and habits which render books, pictures, &c., essential to my comfort, and for the proper performance of the duties for which I am paid, it is necessary for me to know something of what is going on in the world around me—especially in the scientific world. I have a suite of three rooms in a respectable, central location, not far from the corner of Madison-avenue and Thirty-third-street. For these rooms, unfurnished, I pay $300 per annum. As all three rooms communicate with each other, one stove is sufficient to warm the whole of them. I lay in fuel annually at the time when it seems to me to be at its lowest price. For $1 50 per week the janitress of the building in which I am employed brings the day buys my provisions and cooks them for me, and very well she does it, too. She also comes to my rooms once a week and "sets everything to rights." My provisions cost, on an average, $4 per week, my washing about $2 50. With my son's assistance, I make my own bed and keep my rooms in order, with the exception noted above. Now let us see how the whole account stands, and I beg that it may be understood that the figures which I give are genuine extracts from my personal account-book, and represent the average of my expenses for the past four years: Rent, $216; provisions, $613; fuel, $60; washing and cooking, $208; total, $766. Leaving a balance of $434 per annum with which to clothe two persons respectably, and to supply books, newspapers, and the other incidentals of which I have hinted, for which purposes I find it to be no more than sufficient. It is true, but still enough. AMERICAN.

Saving on Very Little.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Seeing in your paper an article on economical housekeeping, and then seeing an article written by a Brooklynite, wherein he lives so very well on only $1,200, I venture to write you a short piece giving as my opinion that he could keep a wife on just what he now lives himself alone. I am a man who lives on less than $800 per year, and pay $10 per week for board. I have always enough to give a little to the poor, besides taking a little pleasure when wanted. I have no wife, but think when I do have one that we can live on $1,200 or $1,400 per year very comfortably. I venture to say that if our Brooklynite thinks he is economical when he spends $1,200 per year, he does not know where he must think a lady would spend, but I am sure that they will spend less than himself, and still she is extravagant and he is very economical.

A CONSTANT READER OF NEW-YORK TIMES.

A Question of Income.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In yesterday's edition I noticed your editorial on "Housekeeping." You base your calculations on an income of $5,000 per year. It seems very clear to myself, and doubtless to thousands of others, how a family receiving this income could, by the exercise of reasonable economy, manage to make ends meet and perhaps save something for the future, but the question with the great bulk of us New-Yorkers is, How is a family with a yearly income ranging from $1,500 to $2,000 to live in this City with any degree of comfort? If you can solve this problem you will confer a blessing on O. T. L.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Jan. 22, 1872.

FORTY-SECOND CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE.—WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Jan. 24.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, from the Committee on Finance, reported that bill to authorize the payment of duplicate checks by disbursing officers, with amendments. Passed.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, of New-Jersey, introduced a bill making an appropriation of $100,000 to enable the President to perfect and carry into effect such rules regulating the civil service as may be from time to time adopted by him. Referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the bill relating to the appointment of superintendents for national cemeteries.

INFORMATION ON A QUESTION OF THE DAY.

Mr. CONKLING, of New-York, offered a resolution requesting the President to give the Senate the following information: The amount of money received and disbursed by the Government, since March 4, 1869; the amount contracted or appropriated by agents or officers, with the amount remaining charged against Internal Revenue officers; the number of defaulters and how many of them have been prosecuted; a statement of the criminal prosecutions that have been instituted for offenses against the Internal Revenue laws; the number of officers or agents receiving pay from the Government, in any branch of the public service, who have been dispensed with since March 4, 1869, and the amount of the aggregate saving thereby; also the same information with reference to the last Administration. Adopted.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MORTON, of Indiana, called up the resolution for a final adjournment of Congress on the third Monday in May.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, opposed taking it up, and called for the yeas and nays.

The Senate voted to take up the resolution. Yeas 34, nays 11.

Mr. MORTON, by consent, modified the resolution, so as to fix the 29th day of May for the adjournment.

There were two amendments pending: Mr. SUMNER's, providing that Congress shall not adjourn until after it shall have passed the Supplementary Civil Rights bill; and Mr. SCHURZ's, providing that it shall not adjourn until after the revision of the tariff and the Internal Revenue laws and the reform of the civil service.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, thought it an extraordinary resolution. Such resolutions had come from the House. There was no occasion for the resolution, because the majority could adjourn at any time when they were prepared to do so. Fixing the day so long beforehand would not hasten legislation.

Messrs. COLE, of California, and CORBETT, of Oregon, thought that Congress ought to adjourn at even an earlier day than that named in the resolution.

Mr. THURMAN, of Ohio, thought Mr. SHERMAN's reasons conclusive against the resolution.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, said he would vote for the resolution simply as a business measure.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, thought that Congress need not delay its adjournment for the sake of civil service reform. In 1869, when the Republican Party came into power it found the offices filled by traitors, and it turned them out and put in loyal men. That was a great step toward civil service reform. Later, Mr. JOHNSON, being unable to get honest men to take offices under him, had to take scoundrels, and he took them. Mr. CHANDLER was interrupted by the expiration of the morning hour, which brought up the Amnesty bill.

CHICAGO RELIEF.

On motion of Mr. LOGAN, of Illinois, it was laid aside and the bill for the relief of Chicago was taken up. The pending amendment was that offered by Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, yesterday, specifying the building materials upon which the drawback is to be allowed.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, moved to amend so as to make the bill apply also to Manistee, in Michigan.

Mr. CARPENTER, of Wisconsin, suggested Pentabiga.

Mr. CHANDLER favored its insertion by Mr. CARPENTER.

Mr. SCOTT, of Pennsylvania, thought that the bill was unconstitutional because it would discriminate in favor of the port of Chicago.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, made a pathetic appeal for the passage of the bill without amendment.

Mr. CARPENTER read a passage from Mr. TRUMBULL's speech on the bill for Portland, of Portland to show that he was then opposed to Congress making charitable appropriations.

Mr. CONKLIN favored the extension of the provisions of the bill to the sufferers in Michigan and Wisconsin, but thought that a better way to give relief would be by a direct appropriation. The amendment was then adopted, at length by Messrs. HARLEY, CHANDLER, LOGAN, CARPENTER and SHERMAN.

All amendments were voted down and the bill as reported from the Committee, was passed, and then, at 6:20 o'clock the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Petitions were received: Of the Common Council and citizens of Hudson, N. Y., praying Congress to authorize the erection of a light-house; of workmen of Philadelphia asking such adjustment of duties as will encourage and defend every home industry; Philadelphia tobacco manufacturers for a uniform tax of sixteen cents a pound on tobacco.

The House took up, as the business of the morning hour, the bill reported yesterday to establish an educational fund and to apply the proceeds of the public lands to the education of the people.

Mr. PEECE, of Mississippi, who reported the bill, addressed the House in support of it. He said he was in correspondence with almost every prominent educator in the country, and they were unanimous in looking to work of the proceeds of the public land for the purpose of stimulating and advancing the education of the people. He was also in correspondence with almost every prominent leader on the labor question, and they were equally unanimous in the same direction. Coming down to the details of the bill, he said that it did not propose to supersede the common school system now existing in States, but rather to strengthen that system. In conclusion he gave notice that he would allow full time for discussion, and would keep the bill in the morning hour until disposed of.

Mr. KERR, of Indiana, proposed that it should be made a special order for a certain day, and from day to day until disposed of.

Mr. PEECE declined to consent to that arrangement.

Mr. MCINTYRE, of Georgia, a member of the Committee on Education and Labor, opposed the bill, arguing that the question of education should be left to the States separately.

Mr. STORMS, of Pennsylvania, another member of the Committee, also opposed the bill as irreconcilable with the principles of the Constitution.

Mr. PARKER, of New-York, another member of the Committee, also opposed the bill. It was avowedly in the interest of the Southern States, and yet they would get a comparatively small proportion of the fund. He believed that the real motive of the bill was to gain a recognition of the principle that Congress had the right to control the domestic affairs of the States—the educational affairs.

Mr. PEECE proposed to have the bill made a special order, but objection was made, and the bill went over till to-morrow.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, having obtained permission to present a petition in the open House instead of under the rules, said that he had the honor of presenting a petition for a declaratory law to assure the rights of suffrage to the women citizens of the United States. They believed that it was their constitutional right to vote; but they only desired to call the attention of Congress to the necessity of enacting a declaratory law to that effect. They claimed it in two views. First, as one of right; second, as one of expediency to the nation. The fact that 36,000 women of America, from almost every State in the Union, of every class and condition, were represented in the petition, asking that their claim to what they conceive to be the greatest right, and which men claimed to be their inalienable right shall be granted. They were not to be told that this was an innovation. Division of property between husband and wife was a greater innovation on the feudal law than this would be. The fact that in England a woman was at the head of public affairs seemed to point out that women might safely be intrusted with the vote. He asked that the petition might be referred to the Judiciary Committee, which was done.

IMPEDIMENTS IN THE WAY OF COMMERCE.

Mr. SHELLABARGER, of Ohio, Chairman of the Committee on Commerce, reported a resolution directing that the Committee inquire

First—Whether the commerce among the several States was injuriously affected by any inadequacy in the present means of land transportation, or by any combination or monopoly in the control or ownership thereof; or by means of any excessive or inequitable rates of freight or fare charged by common carriers, or by means of the burdens or restraints imposed on such commerce by carriers.

Second—Whether the commerce with foreign nations and on the coasts and waters of the United States, or at any port thereof, is subjected to any oppressive or illegal requirements or restraints under quarantine, health or other laws or customs of any State.

Third—Whether at any ports of the United States American seamen or foreign immigrants, on arriving thereat are subjected to wrongs or deprivations which require legislation.

Fourth—What legislation or other means is requisite to release, revive and sustain the towing and foreign commerce of the United States. The Committee or Subcommittee to have power to send for persons and papers, and to sit at such places as may be convenient.

The resolution, which was reported unanimously from the Committee, was adopted.

THE CIVIL APPROPRIATIONS.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. WINDOM in the chair, on the General Civil Appropriation bill.

Mr. GARFIELD, of Ohio, offered an amendment repealing all laws that authorize the publication of laws in newspapers.

Mr. MAYNARD, of Tennessee, objected to it as out of order, in proposing to change an existing law.

The objection was sustained and the amendment excluded.

A provision to pay for such advertising was then inserted on motion of Mr. POMEROY, of Kansas, and was moved out by Mr. MAYNARD and opposed by Mr. GARFIELD and others. The bill now raises a constitutional question.

Mr. GARFIELD moved to strike out the clause repealing the law establishing a branch mint at Carson City, Nevada, and to insert an appropriation of $50,000 for carrying it on.

After a long discussion, the amendment was adopted.

After proceeding as far as page 9 of the bill, the Committee rose, and the House, at 6 o'clock, adjourned.

DRIFT OF PUBLIC OPINION.

THE GREELEY STATUE.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

Why should not GREELEY have a statue? Instead of considering this question at length, we shall assume that he should have one, and prove it by the spontaneous consent, on this point, of "many men of many minds." And a brief analysis of the subscription list will demonstrate that consent. Of course it would be easy for the cynical and the cynical to assign petty motives to some of the contributors. For instance, there might be sardonical remark on the fact that the largest sum is given by an advertising firm, and an expression of wonder as to whether the gift is conditioned on the carving of their card in a conspicuous place on the statue. But such reflections would be unworthy. Let us rather observe in this varied subscription list how GREELEY has won "golden (or bronze) opinions from all sorts of people." That Mr. CHARLES A. DANA heads the list with $100 is not surprising. DANA was formerly a professional associate of GREELEY, and has since been his most consistent eulogist. He has nominated him to the Presidency in various newspapers, "farmers' and manufacturers' candidate," as "scholars" and clergymen's candidate," corresponding with on agricultural page of Chappaqua, as an Amherst Doctor of Laws, as a "sober Franklin." When GREELEY has made a political or lecturing progress DANA has commissioned a Boswell to attend his steps so that, in the words of Dr. JOHNSON's unrivaled biographer, "not a drop of that great man might be lost." In all things and at all times DANA has exhibited GREELEY to the public in his noblest and most dignified attitude, concealing his weaknesses, if there were any to conceal. Above all, DANA has scrupulously avoided making GREELEY ridiculous. It is quite consistent then for DANA to put himself actively in lifting the later Franklin to a pedestal as a companion-piece of the earlier philosopher. Nor is it surprising that Mayor CASPER HALL promptly sent his check for $50. Love did always and greatly abound between HALL and GREELEY, and since HALL got involved in fitting troublesome Tweed stones by him as long as it possibly could, the sender attachment has ripened into intense devotion.

A FINE CROWN FOR A REPUBLICAN EDITOR.

Wilmington (Del.) Commercial.

Some time ago, the New-York Tribune printed a letter written by Mr. GREELEY to the editor of the Lexington (Mo.) Democrat, in which HORACE said he guessed the Missouri man had better not make him the Democratic candidate for President, but suggested the names of COX, TRUMBULL and GRATZ BROWN as available for the purpose, and expressed the opinion that it was a great mistake in the Democracy not to have nominated CHASE in 1868. In this connection, it is quite interesting to note the character of Mr. GREELEY's crony, to whom he writes these kind letters of advice, showing how the Democratic Party ought to do this and that, and we find the following description of the Gazetteer in an exchange paper:

"The mottoes at its head read: 'State Sovereignty!' 'White Supremacy!' and 'Repudiation!' 'This is Liberty!' Its platform is further quaint in its demands: 'Down with the Fifteenth Amendment!' 'Down with the Fifteenth Redemendment!' 'Down with the Fifteenth Redamendment!' Total repudiation of the monstrous Yankee war debt!—the accumulation of which has been caused by accumulated by an unconstitutional mob styling itself a Congress, in the prosecution of an unconstitutional crusade for the accomplishment of an unconstitutional and horrid purpose! The editorial articles of the Gazetteer have a Negro phobia in them, no doubt, intended to make people's hair stand on end. It calls the President beast, bird, vegetable and mineral, and writes his name Mister HIRAM S. GRANT."

If HORACE GREELEY is still sound of mind, this is a curious friend he possesses; but if his intellectual brain is actually addled, certainly no companions were ever more fitly joined.

HEARSAY EVIDENCE.

Hamilton Volunteer, Madison County.

A branch of the Civil Service Reform Committee is now in New-York, investigating the affairs of the Custom-house. The serious charges against that institution having originated in the Tribune, Mr. GREELEY was summoned as a witness before the Committee. His evidence was taken in the City of Albany, and on the jury was not summoned. Had he been summoned, he said that he was on the Mathews inquest, understood such matters, and wanted to go on the jury; so he sat at the inquest. He was found to be a special enemy of STOKES, and pledged to look after the interests of Col. FISK. On entering the room for consultation, the jury came to agreement with a verdict, drawn out in the strong form of an indictment, in which the shooting was set forth as 'killing with malice aforethought,' and other well-known phrases of an indictment. On this verdict the jury were divided, six and six. The gentleman referred to, sang so eloquently upon the adoption of the verdict 'with its strong phrase as the only thing that would satisfy an indignant public. Others contended that the object of the inquest was not to try STOKES—not to anticipate his defense, but simply to ascertain how FISK came to his death. The debate lasted over three hours, and finally a compromise by which the word 'deliberate' was added to the simple phraseology of the verdict."

ROSECRANS ON MEXICO.

A Letter from the General—He Condemns Any and All Filibustering Attempts at Annexation.

To the Editor of the Cincinnati Commercial:

In the number of Nov. 18 (ultimo) of the Free Republica, a weekly published in the City of Mexico, I have just read with regret an ingenious sensational fiction headed "Annexation of Mexico," credited to your journal. My regret is two-fold.

First—That where my character ought to be so well known that an enemy could not mistake it, in spite of my well-announced and thoroughly adverse views, those whom I have a right to claim as friends make me appear as a sort of amiable filibuster of Mexican nationality. I am proud to say that I never sympathized with the filibuster spirit for annexation, or aggrandizement or political annexation, which I regard as at best a compound of ignorant enthusiasm for what suits us and reckless disregard for what suits others. I modestly, but firmly, hold that when, as Britisa colonies, we began the revolutionary war, our cause was as sacred in the eyes of Englishmen or to those of self-government were just and reasonable, and am thankful that, after a seven years' contest the mother country was obliged by treaty to concede the latter. But the more I know the cost of this right to us, the more sacred I regard it in other peoples, and especially our Mexican neighbors, obstructed in their progress, as they have been and are, by adverse circumstances to which we have been wholly strangers. I am aware that many circumstances, by some called fortuitous, have favored our growth and progress, and that, notwithstanding, we have many evils in our system to get rid of before reaching the summit of perfection. But I think we have already made the nearest approach, on a large scale, to national freedom and happiness to human kind. This is because I am think that I deprecate, as hostile to our future success, the injustice of attempting to thrust

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM—JAN. 24.

By Judge Loew.

Sackett vs. Drake; motion to open default granted without costs to either party, judgment to stand as security.

Lewis vs. Miller; one of sureties rejected as insufficient.

LaVigne vs. Barnard; motion to continue injunction denied without costs.

Muller vs. Homan; motion granted.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

No. 94.—Steamer Cayuga, and Hudson River Steam-boat Company, vs. Hoboken Land and Improvement Company.—Appeal from the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of New-York.—This is a case of collision on the Hudson River, between the libellant's ferry-boat James Wall, on a passage from Hoboken to Barclay-street, New-York, and the claimant's steam-boat Cayuga, proceeding down the river, after having left the upper pier of the Deshrosses-street ferryship, bound around the Battery into the East River. The collision occurred at a point opposite Chambers-street, and about one-third of the way across the river. It was claimed, and was found by the Court, that the Cayuga caused the collision by not keeping out of the way when having the James Wall on her starboard side, and both boats were crossing so as to involve a risk of collision.

Mr. Justice NELSON said in his opinion that this plain rule must be observed, and will be steadily enforced on all proper occasions, and in case of a departure from it, followed by a collision, the onus will lie on the offending vessel to show a clear and undoubted special case of excuse.

It is stated here that the evidence does not show the position of the boats, as assumed by the Court, and that the only time the Wall changed her course, and thus contributed toward the collision.

W. J. A. Fuller for appellee; C. Van Steavoort for appellants.

KINGS COUNTY SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT.

Before Judge Pratt.

ACTION ON NOTES GIVEN FOR PURCHASE OF A CALIFORNIA FARM.

Maud Hall vs. Charles Minturn; Amos Hall vs. Charles Minturn.—This action was to recover $1,000, the amount of two notes given by the defendant and two others at San Francisco, Cal., on the 14th of April, 1866, with interest at three per cent a month from that time, such rate of interest being in accordance with the provisions of the California statute law, when the parties agree thereto in writing, as they did in this case.

The defense was that the notes were given in part consideration for the purchase of the right of way between San Francisco and Oakland, which right Horace W. Carpenter, who was the original plaintiff, had obtained from the Trustees of Oakland, and that it was afterward discovered that the trustees had no legal right to give Mr. Carpenter this franchise of the ferry; and that some many conditions for the sale were failed. The defense also set up that an action on these notes was brought in California, and being carried to the Court of Appeals in that State, was decided against the plaintiff.

After hearing the testimony in the case, the jury, under direction of the Court, gave a verdict for the plaintiffs for $6,255.

Before Judge Gilbert.

ACTION AGAINST A LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY BY THE WIFE OF A SUICIDE.

Antonia Gomez de Gogoren vs. The Knickerbocker Life Insurance Company.—This action is brought to recover $10,000, the amount for which Fabian Gogoren, the husband of the plaintiff, was insured in the defendant's Company. The insured was a man of about fifty-five years of age, and on the 24th day of October, he took his own life with a pistol, at his house in New-York City.

On the ground the Company claim that the policy is void by its own terms: "In case he (the insured) shall die by his own hand, sane or insane."

The plaintiff claims that her husband was insane at the time of and before he took his life.

A verdict was rendered for plaintiff for the full amount.

EDUCATIONAL.

Trustees of the College of the City of New-York.

This Board met yesterday afternoon, and organized for the year 1872, by the election of BERNARD SMITH President. The Trustees expressed themselves as desiring an appropriation of $150,000 for the support of the College, instead of $126,000. CHARLES WOOLF, a tailor, had his salary increased from $1,300 to $1,400 per annum. There were increases of salaries of four tutors, each to the sum of $2,000. The Trustees then adjourned.

Department of Public Instruction.

This Board held a meeting yesterday afternoon, President SMITH in the chair.

The Mayor sent in a communication, enclosing the resignation of FRANCIS A. PALMER as a member of this Board and appointing ENOCH L. FANCHER to fill the vacancy.

A statement was received from the President of the Board stating that the whole amount received from the schools of this City for the relief of the Chicago sufferers was $13,059 61.

Hon SMITH ELY, member of Congress from the Eleventh and Seventeenth Wards, sent in a communication offering to give the position of a vacant cadetship in the Military Academy at West Point, to the scholar residing in the district who would prove himself the most meritorious, the name of such pupil to be sent to Mr. ELY by the 1st day of March next. The thanks of the Board were extended to Mr. ELY, and it was resolved to appoint a committee on the subject. The President then announced the Standing Committees for the year 1872, as follows:

Finance—Lewis, Wood, Brennan, Van Vorst and Fancher. Teachers—Gross, Lewis and Duryea. Buildings—Ingersoll, Lewis and Fancher. Supplies—Van Vorst, Wood and Brennan. Auditing Committee—Sands, Wood, Duryea, Ingersoll and Van Vorst. Studies—England, Gross and Sands. Sites—Brennan, Jarvis and Ingersoll. Rules, &c.—Jarvis, Ingersoll and Sands. Normal College—Wood, Duryea, Gross, Jarvis and Fancher.

The question came up upon the payment of clerks to the local Boards, denying the application for past services rendered by them, and making provision for future payments, to be fixed by the Board. Mr. BRENNAN resisted the payment of the salaries, on the ground, adverse to paying either for past or future services of these clerks. Both reports were laid over under the rule.

The following is a resume of the report of the Finance Committee for 1871:

Receipts (including balance up to Jan. 1, 1871.)	$2,460,526 46
Payments	2,445,851 91
Balance to the credit of this Board Dec. 30, 1871	$14,674 55
Balance due this Board, for which a requisition was made upon the Controller Dec. 27, 1871	$94,681 54

The City Superintendent sent in the annual report for the year 1871. The following is a comparative statement of the attendance in the schools for the past two years:

Police Captains' Tribulations—Four of Them Placed on Trial for Neglect of Duty.

Four Captains of Police were placed on trial yesterday before Commissioners BARR and MANIERRE.

The first case called was that of Capt. THADDEUS C. DAVIS, of the Tenth Precinct, who was charged by Inspector WALLING, with being at a fire in the Bowery without his uniform. The Captain admitted the charge, and stated in his defense that he was going to dinner at the time, and stopped at the fire to give directions to his men. He further added that Superintendent KELSO had excused him from wearing his uniform while eating to his meals. Superintendent KELSO was called, and testified that he excused Captains who took their meals in restaurants where liquor is sold from wearing their uniforms while taking their meals.

Capt. IRA S. GARLAND, of the Eleventh Precinct, was charged with being in the Union-square Theatre in civilian attire. The Captain did not deny the charge.

Commissioner MANIERRE advised Superintendent KELSO to revoke the permission given to Captains to go to their meals in plain attire. The Superintendent said that he had already revoked all such permissions.

The next case called was that of Capt. HENRY RILEY, of the Twenty-third Precinct, who was charged with general neglect of duty, and not devoting his whole time to the service of the Police Department from Jan. 1 to 17. Inspector WALLING said that upon examining the blotter at the station-house he found that the Captain had slept but one night in the Station-house during the period stated above, and entries appeared on several occasions, showing that the Captain had left the Station-house between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, and did not return until 8 or 9 o'clock the next morning. Capt. HEDDEN said that on several of the nights that he did not sleep in the Station-house the Captain gave his permission from the time he left the Station-house until daylight, and thought that a Captain could attend to the affairs just as well though he did not sleep in the Station-house all night and every night.

Capt. CHAS. MCDONNELL, of the Thirtieth Precinct, was then arraigned on charges of general and systematic neglect of duty. From Jan. 1 to 17, Inspector WALLING deposed that he had examined the blotter and found that the Captain only attended one roll-call in twenty-four hours and never slept in the Station-house.

The Sergeants of the Thirtieth Precinct were examined, and deposed that the Captain was in the daily habit of leaving the Station-house between six and ten o'clock in the evening, and would not return again until the next afternoon.

In his defense, Capt. MCDONNELL showed that the house was in a dilapidated condition and almost unfit for human habitation; that the Sergeants had no place for their beds, and were compelled either to sleep in a chair or in the bed of an absent patrolman. The Captain also stated that Police Surgeon ELY had ordered him not to sleep in the house, as it was detrimental to his health. He lived six miles from his precinct, and was compelled to go home to his meals.

Dr. ELY was called and testified that the Captain had had a very bad cold, and he had advised him not to sleep in the Station-house and that the Captain's room was unhealthy, as it was too open.

All the cases were referred to the Board for adjudication, and Commissioner MANIERRE remarked that not one-half of the Captains attended to their duties properly, but left too much entirely to the Sergeants. The Commissioner thought they had better dismiss some the Captains and leave the duty to be done entirely by the Sergeants.

The Alleged Post-Office Embezzlement.

The case of Mr. RILEY, Assistant Superintendent of the Foreign Department in the Post-office, came up for final hearing before Commissioner BETTS yesterday. Several witnesses testified that the practice of opening misdirected letters was common in the Post-office; the letters were opened by the Superintendents, or Assistant Superintendents of Departments. One witness said that had such a letter as Mr. RILEY was accused of opening come into his hands while at his work, he should in the ordinary way of business have taken it to Mr. RILEY for that gentleman to do with it as he had done. Col. HARPER, Superintendent of the Box Department, said that under the same circumstances he should have considered he did right in examining the letter as Mr. RILEY had.

The defense here rested, and counsel summed up. Commissioner BETTS said he would render his decision on Friday.

DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public reposes in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still directe its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The campaign in Connecticut begins well. No nominating Convention ever showed a better spirit, or more hearty accord, than the Republican Convention at Hartford yesterday. In unanimously renominating the entire State ticket, and in choosing able and careful men for the National Convention, who are known to be favorable, as the case now stands, to the like renomination of the national ticket, the Connecticut Convention has taken an important and influential position. There is no reason to doubt that its action fairly reflects the sense of the people of the State.

Among the leaders of the Tammany gang at Albany is HANK SMITH, Police Commissioner, who has excellent reasons of his own for hanging on to his present office. This man is in constant communication with ALVORD, and both of them with TOM FIELDS. After the defeat of Col. HAWKINS' bill, on Monday, TOM FIELDS walked across the floor of the Assembly to ALVORD, and they shook hands cordially together—a very natural and proper proceeding. They are both working for the reinstatement of Tammany, and against the people. As for HANK SMITH, when is he going to return the money filched from the poor depositors in the Bowling-green Savings Bank? Instead of flourishing about at the Delevan House, ought he not to be making some amends to the half-starved families whom he has helped to defraud? As Mr. JOHN FOX told the swindled depositors, on Tuesday night: "So long as the dishonest officials could walk about the streets, after stealing the people's money, nothing might be expected; but, when the strong arm of the law was brought to bear upon them, they would probably bring back some of the stolen money." Now, HANK SMITH was the President of the Bowling-green Bank, and, therefore, the very chief of the dishonest officials in question. But do we hear the Tribune challenging an inquiry into his conduct, or "admonishing" him, or telling him to "stand forth," or raking the gutters for affidavits against him?

An examination into the affairs of the Bowling-green Savings Bank shows that there is very urgent need for some explanation from HANK SMITH. It appears that no less than $249,306 69 of the depositors' money was placed out on "call loans," and Judge HOGAN, who reports on the condition of the bank, says: "Among the call loans appear the names of persons credited with large amounts, whom the receiver or your Committee have been unable to find. Your Committee believes that such loans purporting to have been made are fraudulent, and that the names are fictitious." Now, is this a transaction which requires explanation from the President of the bank, or is it not? Considering that "HANK" contrived to drag Mr. GREELEY's name into connection with this bank, the silence of the Tribune about it is, perhaps, surprising. We find it very severe upon Mr. TREWILLIGER for having drawn about five thousand dollars in two years, to which it says he was not entitled. But it is as silent as the grave about this most shameful conduct of its friend "HANK" SMITH. What sort of "reform" do you call this?

The Senate Committee, yesterday, brought out another striking piece of testimony, which will not suit Mr. GREELEY or Senators BAYARD and CASSERLY. Mr. A. T. STEWART, having a few days since sworn that the much-abused Mr. MURPHY made as good a Collector as he ever knew, Mr. HUTTON, of BENHARD & HUTTON, an old merchant of twenty-four years' standing, deposed that he desired to bear witness to the increased ability, efficiency, and honesty which has characterized the administration of the Custom-house at this Port within the last few years. He was followed by Mr. MOORE, who has been for twenty-five years the Custom-house clerk of PHELPS, DODGE & Co. He swore that unless in the General Order business, there was no cause of complaint in the Customs service, except that he thought there was not force enough to do the work; the clerks work faithfully, but the force has not been increased in proportion to the increase of business, and the Collector told him that the failure to increase the force was caused by a desire to be economical. This declaration elicited from Senator BUCKINGHAM the remark that an increase of force and expense was not exactly the business of a Committee on Retrenchment.

The Political Tricksters Against the Public.

Those who have closely watched the drift of events since the opening of the Legislature, will by this time have made up their minds that the cause of the people is in no little danger of being defeated—temporarily—by the politicians. We need not remind our readers of the fact which they must know only too well—that the Republicans in this State are much divided, and that one section owes allegiance to Senator FENTON. Senator FENTON, it is equally well known, has not received what he considers his due share of Federal patronage during the past year or two. He is, therefore, in favor of "smashing the machine," as the slang goes—reform never was a matter of much consequence to him, and he is not going to trouble his head about it now. His followers are very actively at work in the Legislature to frustrate all reform measures—and in this, we are sorry to say, they are much assisted by the New-York Tribune, Senator FENTON's organ.

The Tribune now goes so far as to "bully" the Committee of Seventy, in that rowdy and vulgar style which it sometimes assumes, for daring to propose a new charter, or offer any suggestions whatever to the Legislature. Its faction gained a victory in the Assembly on Monday night, and this single triumph has turned the Tribune's head. It adopts the coarsest method of scolding and threatening the true reformers. It calls them a faction; tells them that if they persevere in their present course they can soon have a larger majority against them than that of Monday; attacks Col. HAWKINS for desiring to serve the people rather than the Fenton gang; and publishes an editorial paragraph, which we reprint entire, and ask our readers to carefully peruse:

"Most people will be surprised at the action taken by the Committee of Seventy in regard to the bill pending in the Legislature to provide a Board of Audit for this City. One would suppose that the Legislature ought to be considered the proper law-making body, and that interference by a Citizens' Committee would be mere impertinence. But, after the Twomby bill, by a decided vote, has been accepted in the Assembly, sitting as Committee, the Committee of Seventy assumes to lecture our representatives upon their duties and actually votes them instructions. This extraordinary and partisan proceeding will be very generally condemned. We admonish these gentlemen that they are transcending their powers and preparing to destroy their own popularity."

We need not remind the public how much the Committee of Seventy has done for their cause. At a time when the Tribune was defending Mayor HALL and praising SWEENY as a man of "towering spirit," the Committee of Seventy was endeavoring to overthrow the entire Tammany gang. The Tribune now accuses it of "impertinence," for endeavoring to prevent a disappointed Republican faction from throwing away the victory won on the 7th of November. It says that the Legislature is the "proper law-making body"—as if the people had not had enough of laws made by our State Legislature on its own "responsibility." People who cling to the belief that the Tribune does not really mean to oppose the work of reform, had better read the above editorial from its columns, and then ask themselves what it can possibly be meant for but to encourage the corrupt factions which have too long held the sway at Albany?

That the Tribune is acting on a carefully-prepared plan with the Tammany Republicans and Democrats, is shown by a curious little coincidence. Yesterday the Herald published an article identical in spirit with the one which appeared in the Tribune. Everybody must remember the part the Herald took in the attack upon the Tammany Ring. Like the Tribune, it threw cold water on it—but the Tribune was shamed by its party ties into making a show of doing something. It now substantially stands in the same spot as the Herald. Listen to the latter paper:

"We may therefore fairly conclude that, in spite of the deposition of Col. HAWKINS, whose original selection as their leader in the Assembly was a blunder, the propositions of the Committee in regard to the new City Government will be ignored, if not in the Committee of Cities, at least in the final action on the floor of the House. This being the case, and the City Departments being now in the hands of honest men, the best thing the Seventy can do is to dissolve and leave the practical reconstruction of the Government to the State Legislature. We have already had enough of experimental legislation, and of irregular, irresponsible meddling with the machinery of government. Their mission is now completed, and there is no further use for their services. Their charter work is before the Legislature, and nothing is left them but to retire gracefully and leave the government machinery to run in its legitimate channels."

The Committee of Seventy, it is quite clear, are considered very much in the way. But in whose way? Certainly, not that of the people. The Tribune and Herald may succeed in abusing the only body of gentlemen which has rendered any material assistance in breaking down the Tammany gang. Do the public agree with this course? Ought they not to make known their views at a great meeting, so that there may be no mistake on the subject?

FENTON and his supporters are determined to upset the reform movement if they can. The Tribune will do its best to assist. But there are always the people in the background. If they have not made sure of the work this time, they will take a little more pains to do it thoroughly next. The triumph which FENTON or his friends may gain just now will be short-lived. Political tricksters may carry their points for aught we can say, but when the people see that their expression of opinion last November is laughed at, they will see that justice is done on the offenders.

Stealing as the Trade.

It is not a pleasant task to expose the malicious purposes, the perversions, the prevarications, the slanders, and direct falsifications of a prominent journal,—one that professes to be of our own political party, and which in days gone by has done good service. But the Tribune has laid that disagreeable task upon the shoulders of every journal that would have the Government of the United States treated with respect, and its present Administration judged with decent fairness. In its wrath at the defeat of the machinations of its faction, the Tribune has become utterly reckless, and not only strikes wild, but hits foul. Yesterday morning it did not hesitate to charge two witnesses with perjury—Mr. CORNELL, Surveyor of the Port, and Col. LEET. Whoever read the testimony of the latter gentleman must have been impressed with the witness' manliness, frankness, and readiness to answer any and every question that was or might have been asked him. On being asked if he had any objection to the Committee's seeing his books, he replied at once, "Not the least in the world." He testified without hesitation or qualification that Gens. PORTER and BABCOCK had not a dollar's interest, directly or indirectly, in his General Order business, and destroyed by the best evidence several other very dreadful stories that the Tribune and its faction had been blowing about the City on the authority of rumor, "every body says," and "it is generally understood." This made the case a pretty bad one for the Tribune and its friends, and what does that paper do but simply say, "Who will believe Col. LEET?" In other words, if you swear against the Tribune, you must have perjured yourself. So it tells Surveyor CORNELL plainly that he would do well to "look up the word perjury" in WORCESTER'S Dictionary; because he declared that a pretended notice, signed "THOMAS MURPHY, Collector," demanding two per cent. upon all salaries paid in the Custom-house, was a forgery.

We proposed looking into this question for the benefit of the Tribune, as well as that of our own readers; and as Mr. DANIEL SHEEHAN, the Tribune's witness, a dismissed inspector, has twice declared that such a notice was posted up in a very conspicuous place in the Custom-house, to-wit, the Surveyor's office, we sent a reporter to the Custom-house to make inquiries. The result was this: The Assistant Collector, Mr. OLINDE, did not know and had never heard of such a notice; the Chief Correspondence Clerk, Mr. TEELOAR, who writes all notices which are signed by the Collector, and put up in the Custom-house, did not know and had never heard of such a notice; the Keeper of the Custom-house, Mr. HILLYER, whose ubiquitous function is indicated by the name of his office, did not know and had never heard of such a notice; the Deputy Surveyor, Mr. BENEDICT, under whose very nose the paper must have been set up, did not know and had never heard of such a notice. All these gentlemen were in their present positions last October, when the notice in question is said to have been issued; and they are men of character and intelligence, who, from their positions, know all that is going on in the Custom-house, and from whose ears, if not from whose eyes, such an extraordinary and such a foolish proceeding as that attributed to Mr. MURPHY could not have been kept back an hour. More than this, our reporter could not find a single person in the Custom-house who had seen or heard of this notice. But he did hear from the best authority that there was an inspector dismissed last Autumn, not because he took this or that political step, but because his general condition was such that his steps, political or other, were very unsteady, and his brain so confused that he could not tell "SHEEHAN" from "MURPHY" if they were written up before him. Moreover, the columns of the Tribune (Jan. 18) show that the course of "DANIEL SHEEHAN, a former Inspector in the Custom-house," was so very devious in borrowing money upon his pay-roll, that he subjected himself to arrest on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, and that although the charge could not be technically maintained, it went so far that he was locked up in Ludlow-street Jail.

But perhaps the most thorough exposure of the mingled bad faith and blundering in this matter, on the part of the Tribune, or its pet witness and co-worker, is found in the pretended notice itself, as it is published in that paper. It has appeared there on two occasions, being set forth each time with great show of exactness and precision; for mind you Mr. SHEEHAN is suing Ex-Collector MURPHY for the money paid in upon this pretended demand. Well, here is the notice as it first appeared in the Tribune:

To all whom it may concern:

All persons in the employ of the Custom-house will be required to pay, at the office of the Surveyor, two per cent. upon their salaries for the past year. By order of

THOMAS MURPHY,
Collector of the Port of New-York.

NEW-YORK, October, 1871.

And here it is as it appeared in yesterday's Tribune, in a letter from Mr. SHEEHAN himself:

NOTICE—All persons employed in this Department will be taxed two per cent. upon their salary in the office of the Surveyor.

THOMAS MURPHY,
Collector of the Port.

It will be seen that these pretended copies of one notice are not only unlike, but unlike in so many and such important particulars, that the value of either of them as evidence (both coming from one source) is absolutely nothing. If that is Mr. SHEEHAN's case, the money that he will recover would buy a very small glass of whisky indeed; so small, that, to enable him to see that one, he would be obliged to drink two or three others.

This is very small business. It would be beneath the dignity of respectable journalism, were it not for the persistency with which men like Mr. DANIEL SHEEHAN and Mr. HORACE GREELEY, who have been disappointed in retaining or in attaining office, malign those who they think have injured them in their pockets or their prospects. There is no limit of probability or decency in the outpourings of their spite. They are not consistent, not even coherent, as we have seen, for a week together. That officers in various Departments of the Government do contribute, and have contributed for many years, and through many Administrations, to the political expenses of their party is doubtless true. And who will deny the right or the propriety of their doing so, if such is their wish? But it was necessary to the case of the Tribune and Mr. SHEEHAN, that they should show that under Gen. GRANT and Mr. MURPHY contributions were demanded and exacted, at a rate per centum and by official requirement, which would be essentially wrong and officially improper. They undertook between them to get up a case of this kind; and that which we have now presented is the lovely result of their united labor.

The Plea of Erie.

On Tuesday Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD's partner, Mr. SHEARMAN, appeared before a committee of the State Senate. He announced that he had been "engaged" by the Erie Railway Company to argue in their interest against certain bills pending before the Committee. He was mistaken in that statement. Neither he nor Mr. FIELD has been engaged by the Erie Company for any of the peculiar service for which they have found it honorable to receive pay during the past three years. The engagement has been with the Erie Ring, which usurps the powers and appropriates the property of the Erie Company, in violation of law and in defiance of justice. The Senate Committee will do well to bear this fact in mind; it is the key to Mr. SHEARMAN's entire argument.

Mr. SHEARMAN asserts that all the Ring wants is to be let alone. That is natural. It is the most that any thief in actual possession of his booty would ask. A profound respect for the status quo is to be expected from men who rightly apprehend that if the situation is changed, it must be by their surrender of the vast property they have appropriated.

Mr. SHEARMAN is exquisitively sensitive to the danger of arbitrary action by the Attorney-General, which he sees in the bill advocated by Gen. BARLOW. "It is scarcely possible for him," he declares, "to speak of the subject without betraying a warm indignation." We do not wonder. Circumstances change cases, and the circumstances of Mr. SHEARMAN's clients are very seriously changed. In 1870 they could see no harm in intrusting to the then Attorney-General the sole power to bring suits to recover money or property fraudulently obtained from corporations by faithless directors. They saw no danger to the interests of the community at large arising from the fact that if one-fifth, or one-half of the corporations—banks, insurance companies, railways, manufacturing companies—of this State had been robbed of their corporate property by their directors, Mr. MARSHALL D. CHAMPLAIN should have it in his discretion to say when and how suits should be brought to right these wrongs, or whether such suits should be brought at all. That was an instance, the public will perceive, where the Erie bull was let loose to gore at pleasure the helpless herds of other people. The proprietors of the savage animal saw no danger to any one in the procedure. Now it is proposed to chain up the Erie bull, and even to give those who have been trampled so mercilessly by it for several years a little chance for such fair retaliation as is consistent with proper legislation for the whole people. Of course the case is completely changed.

Mr. SHEARMAN is equally concerned about the discretion given to Judges to suspend directors and officers of corporations on proper proof, pending the progress of suits brought to secure their removal, on the ground of fraudulent appropriation of corporate property. "Is it necessary," he cries, "to give any more discretion to Judges? Are our rights now too well defined?" Your rights, Mr. SHEARMAN, or those of the corrupt gang in whose behalf you have prostituted your talents, are altogether too well defined. The trouble has been that in defining yours, the Tweed Legislature not only left those of your helpless shareholders without definition, but they left them without existence. Your clients received a definite right in 1869 to hold possession of the Erie Railway for at least three years. They hold it now by virtue of it. But by that act the right of the shareholders to turn out directors who were stealing on every side, and to recover control of their property was destroyed.

Besides, Mr. SHEARMAN probably forgets that the Judges to whose discretion the bill now before the Legislature proposes to surrender the fate of his client, will not, in all probability, include BARNARD or CARDOZO. This may not add to the security of his clients, but it will materially affect the feeling of the people.

We have no doubt that the Senate Committee will know how to appreciate at its true value the specious pleading of the Erie lawyers. If there are any features of the bill liable to abuse, let them be modified. [illegible] with wise regard to the facts, and not on the petition of men who have long since lost the right to be heard with respect before any tribunal, by the facile advocacy they have lent to shameless schemes for the subversion of justice, and the debauchery of the Courts.

The Prison Convention.

The most advanced thinker on prison reform whom this country has produced was a citizen of New-York; and therefore it seemed fitting that the great movement, which is to go forth from this nation in favor of enlightened and humane methods of treatment for the convict and juvenile delinquent, should have its impetus given in the Metropolis. In the national meeting to be held on Friday evening, in Steinway Hall, upon prison reform, we trust that the name of EDWARD LIVINGSTON will be fully remembered—a man who almost originated the reformatory measures for juvenile criminals, since embodied in Houses of Refuge and Schools of Reform, and who made known, many years in advance of the first public expression of the great prison reform, called the "Irish Prison System," the ideas which lay at the base of that reform, and which the prison management of this country has not yet attained to. Mr. LIVINGSTON's thoughts on this great subject were singularly in advance of his times, and even of our own times, and were so wise and far-reaching as to place him among the leading minds of the world in the science of penal reform.

We respectfully suggest that some of the distinguished speakers for Friday evening refresh themselves with a perusal of the Livingston "System of Penal Law for the United States," published as far back as the year 1828. This important meeting for Friday evening—which is to be addressed by Gov. SEYMOUR upon the subject of "Penal Reform," to which he has given much attention, by Senator WILSON, Speaker BLAINE, the Turkish Minister, the Catholic Archbishop, and the Puritan reformer, Mr. BEECHER, as well as other eminent speakers—is designed especially to awaken public attention to the discipline and proper treatment of criminals, to the repression of crime, and the improvement and better administration of penal law, and to the best means of checking the growth of the criminal and dangerous classes. It is called by the "National Prison Association" of the United States, which held its last annual meeting at Cincinnati, and it is hoped that its action will secure an active co-operation by all the States and Territories of the Union in this great movement. The Convention will have for special business to listen to the report of Dr. WINES, who was appointed by the President to represent the country at the International Prison Congress, which is to meet in London on the 3d of July, 1872, and who has been occupied for several months in securing the co-operation of the various Governments of Europe in the proposed Convention of all nations. Dr. WINES has been remarkably successful in engaging the interest of all the Cabinets of Europe in this humane movement. On that day, delegates will assemble from every civilized country of the world in the British Metropolis, and, during a session of two weeks, will discuss and read papers upon all the great topics connected with penal reform, the repression of crime, the improvement of legislation, and the prevention of juvenile offenses against the law, as well as the best methods of reform.

In such a humane Congress, this country ought to be well represented. Our legislators and penal reformers need the contact with advanced and humane ideas which this assembly will give them. We are notoriously far behind the stage of moral progress in this matter, which Ireland and England have partly reached. Other countries, too, will show us many points where our prison system is lamentably defective. We shall hear there of prisons where "hope" is not "left behind" by the convicts, from which the prisoner goes forth better than he entered, and into whose management politics never intrude. We shall learn that imprisonment can be made a probation and means of reform, as well as punishment. The managers of our juvenile reformatories will there see that the world's most enlightened judgment is against the congregated system, and in favor of the family plan, and they will return with many new ideas to engraft on our methods of juvenile reform. On one field alone, can Europe learn of us—the great subject of popular education, and the methods for the prevention of juvenile crime and pauperism which have been so successful in New-York, and which might be adopted and imitated in European cities with great advantage. Such a congress of humanity, and for so Christian an object, should have the heartiest co-operation, both of our citizens and of our State and National Governments. Every Territory and State should be represented there; every Reformatory and House of Refuge should have its delegate, and all the great preventive charities should appear there by appropriate numbers. The Convention on Friday evening will prepare worthily for such an object.

Liberia.

The friends of the colored race, and especially that fraction of them who have contended for the ability of black men to govern themselves, have regarded events in Liberia during the past year with deep anxiety. It has been hoped that the experiment on the coast of Africa, being isolated from the perturbing influence of contiguous nationalities, and being conducted both by and for people of the same race, might furnish an example and a vindication for the negro all over the world. Of late this hope has been clouded by events that have not been uncommon in white republics, but from which it was trusted the representative black one would be free; and the impending danger, as usual, has had its primary source in the ambition of a single man.

The late President, E. J. ROYE, very clearly made up his mind to play the part of LOUIS NAPOLEON. Elected for two years only, he watched his chance and proclaimed himself President for four. The Legislature replied by a vote to the effect that the Constitution had not been amended so as to lengthen his Presidential term to four years. On this ROYE issued another proclamation, forbidding the annual biennial election, and instructing his officers to prevent the citizens from voting. He then proceeded to negotiate a foreign loan, contrary to an express law, and used the proceeds to strengthen his position. In various ways he has ignored and overridden the fundamental principle of the Liberian Constitution, which is copied from our own, and which makes the Executive, Legislative and Judicial Departments of the Government distinct and separate. He has, for example, appointed a Senator to an executive office, dictated the selection of jurors in the Courts, and concentrated arms and munitions of war, with the obvious design of enforcing with a high hand such autocratic measures as the people seemed inclined to resist. That President ROYE was enabled and permitted to go so far as he did without let or hindrance, had certainly a very bad look. There were strong indications in this that Liberia would drift into irresponsible despotism. No one appeared to have the strength or courage to cope with the strong-willed and audacious man who sat in the Executive chair of the little colored Commonwealth. The illustration of negro self-government, the counterbalance to Hayti, the germ of African regeneration, seemed to be crumbling to dust, and one of the noblest efforts ever made to raise and to vindicate an injured race threatened to end in "careless ruin."

But a change has come, so swift and so conclusive as to dissipate those fears, and to justify warm congratulations for all friends of liberty. The people of Liberia have waited patiently, it is true, and, indeed, have appeared at times almost willing to submit their necks to the foot of the oppressor. It is, however, plain now that they never had any idea of the kind. They wished to have a thoroughly good cause, and to let the intention of the usurper ROYE become absolutely unmistakable. By pursuing this course, the popular leaders had the sagacity to perceive that they would not only secure the greatest unanimity among their own people when the moment for resistance should arrive, but retain the respect of the world at large. They have now quietly arisen, overturned the Government of ROYE, and clapped that aspiring ruler into prison, together with all the members of his Cabinet; under the auspices of an Executive Committee the regular legal election has been held, and Ex-President ROBERTS has again been chosen to the Executive chair; while the illegal acts of ROYE have each and all been canceled in strict conformity with the Constitution. The ultimate disposition of ROYE and his friends has not yet been decided upon, but President ROBERTS, by last dates, was to be duly installed in the first week of January, and there is every reason to believe that the infant Republic of Liberia will continue to flourish, with better prospects of stability and permanence than before.

Passages in the Life of a Political Impostor.

We have received the following curious letter from the man named MUDGETT, who has tried to obtain fresh notoriety, recently, by appearing before the Senate Committee:

NO. 48 PINE-STREET,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 24, 1872.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I notice in a leading article of your paper this morning you say: "There were MUDGETT and LINDSAY—two men who lost fat pickings by Mr. GRINNELL's removal."

I wish to say that my contract was not with Mr. Grinnell, and had expired, and other parties were performing the same before his removal; and, further, I was never an applicant, or enjoyed any emolument or privilege in the gift of Mr. GRINNELL.

I hope you will do me the justice to give this note as conspicuous a place as you did the slander, that I am bound to suppose you have unintentionally published concerning me. Respectfully yours, &c. B. F. MUDGETT.

Now here we have an excellent example of the kind of evidence which the rejected appointment seekers, and discharged office holders, have been offering recently on the Custom-house business. They shave the truth as near as they can, but cannot keep themselves clear of falsehood. We stated that MUDGETT had lost "fat pickings," which he had enjoyed under Mr. GRINNELL. The ill-used MUDGETT then writes to deny that he held any contract in Mr. GRINNELL's time, and endeavors to lead people to suppose that he never enjoyed any pickings whatever—indeed, the insinuation that he did so he calls a slander. This is a sample of what people call the prevaricating falsehood.

Now here are a few facts about MUDGETT's career, which he will not be able to explain away, and which will serve to show the public what sort of men they are who are now being dragged out from holes and corners to rehearse their stale grievances against the Administration. They are all pretty much alike. We may take MUDGETT as a very fair sample of the rest—BERNARD HESS, LINDSAY and the rest of them. These are the men who, with the assistance of Mr. GREELEY are sworn to "break down" Gen. GRANT.

MUDGETT was Deputy Collector in 1861. About this time he signed a note, upon which being sued, he swore that the signature was not his own, but was a forgery. On this testimony a man was brought from Chicago on suspicion of having committed the forgery. On being privately examined by the bank officers, the latter were convinced of the man's innocence. Suit was brought against MUDGETT, carried to the Court of Appeals, and affirmed in 1871. JOHN J. TOWNSEND was counsel for plaintiff.

In 1867 MUDGETT resigned as Deputy Collector, to take the labor contract in the public stores, at $80,000 a year. This he held for three years, when it was given out to the lowest bidder, and went for $68,000 or $70,000. MUDGETT being very much "disgruntled," and being a very loose talker, said a great many foolish things, and among others charged Gen. PORTER with having a pecuniary interest in the General Order business. Being in Washington, Gen. PORTER sent for him, and a scene took place in which MUDGETT came out at what is popularly known as the "little end of the horn." Gen. PORTER asked MUDGETT to go at once with him to Gen. GRANT, and to state the facts, in order that, if true, he might be sent out of the White House. MUDGETT abjectly apologized, and confessed that he had, in his sorriness and disappointment, spoken hastily and without sufficient information.

Just before the removal of Gen. PALMER, MUDGETT was appointed Assistant Appraiser—in fact this was the cause of PALMER's removal. Every one was astonished at the appointment. Soon after, MUDGETT was removed by Secretary BOUTWELL; he sent in his resignation which BOUTWELL refused to accept, and discharged him outright. MUDGETT published a scurrilous letter to the Secretary, and returned to him his letter of discharge, saying that his resignation had already placed him beyond his jurisdiction.

During the war MUDGETT boarded in this City, in a house with a clerk or secretary of a mining company, from whom he learned that Gen. MERRITT, of the Confederate Army, owned stock in the company. He at once informed; the shares were confiscated, and he obtained the informer's share.

MUDGETT's contract was not under Mr. GRINNELL—so far he speaks the truth. The inferences he seeks to convey are all false. MUDGETT is now in the field against Gen. GRANT, with all his war-paint and accoutrements. Bad for the General, is it not?

The Senate Apportionment Bill.

The Senate Committee on the Judiciary have reported an Apportionment bill entirely different from that passed by the House before the Holidays. They have concluded in favor of keeping the House at its present number, simply reapportioning the members to meet the changes in population since the last census. This would reduce the representation of the New-England States six, and that of New-York and Pennsylvania five, giving New-Jersey and Georgia each one additional, and the Western States, including Missouri, nine additional. The following table shows the differences in the operation of the two bills:

MINOR TOPICS.

Two murder cases in "respectable society" have riveted intense public interest in England of late. Both have been commented upon at length in our columns, and the sequel in each is now close at hand. The first was that of Miss CHRISTIANA EDMUNDS, of Brighton, who went about poisoning sweets, and causing them to be given to different persons who had been so unlucky as to rouse her aversion. The second was that of the well-known author and classical scholar, Rev. JOHN SELBY WATSON, who killed his wife. Both these persons have been found guilty and sentenced to be hung. The case of the woman EDMUNDS is one of the most atrocious on record. It admits of no mitigation, and the sentence will doubtless be carried into effect. As regards WATSON, reasonable grounds exist for questioning his sanity at the time he committed his murderous assault, and he has consequently been reprieved by the Queen, and will probably be sent to a lunatic asylum. Still another instance of homicide by a person of social position has just occurred in Herefordshire. The assassin is one THOMAS F. CARLYLE, a graduate of Oxford and son of a clergyman, and the victim his aunt's coachman, a man named THOMAS PRICE. The act was performed with a double-barreled breech-loader, and the provocation was that PRICE tried to prevent CARLYLE from committing suicide.

It is creditable to the humanity of the owner of "Manders' Traveling Show," the exhibition in which poor MASSARENI was torn to pieces by the lions, that no more of the kind of "entertainment" which led to that catastrophe will henceforth be allowed in it. A man, ambitious, it would seem, to meet the fate of the "Lion-King," wrote next day after his death the following odd proposal:

GUILDFORD, Jan. 6, 1872.

Mrs. Manders:

MADAM: I have heard of the accident which happened to TOM MOCARTEY, which I am very sorry for, but if you think proper I will engage to perform the lions. Hoping to receive a favorable answer, I remain your old servant,

TOM KING.

This elicited the public announcement that no more such performances were to be permitted in the "show," so that the lions will be deprived of all chance to repeat their sanguinary diversion for the future.

Under the impression that the merchants of Baltimore are allowed to pay duties on foreign goods in currency, the President of the Charleston, S. C., Chamber of Commerce lately wrote to Secretary BOUTWELL asking him to accord the same privilege to the merchants of the latter city. The reply of Mr. BOUTWELL is, in effect, that the accommodation given to the merchants of Baltimore consists in the sale of coin by the United States Assistant Treasurer at New-York rates, in order to allow the importers an opportunity to buy all they need. But as such a privilege can only be granted at ports where the accumulation of Government coin is greater than the demand, the request from Charleston had to be refused. At the same time, Mr. BOUTWELL having a desire to oblige, has been good enough to say that importers may deposit their duties with the United States Assistant Treasurer at New-York, in the name of the Collector at Charleston, to which they can afterward present the certificates of deposit in lieu of actual coin. Since the war, gold has been very scarce in the South, and, though trifling the accommodation may seem which has been conceded by Mr. BOUTWELL, it will be warmly appreciated by the importers of Charleston.

They have in the British Islands what is called the Absconding Debtor's act, which sometimes puts intending travelers to serious inconvenience. A writ which works in practice like our "ne exeat" is the disagreeable impediment, and its issue leads at times to romantic situations. One that was scarcely contemplated when the instrument was devised, was brought about on New-Year's Day near Leamington. A certain German did what wives rarely forgive—fell in love with another woman. The wife discovered that her faithless spouse was on the point of eloping with her rival. Thus provoked, the injured woman went off to a creditor of her husband's, to whom a large sum was due, and told him that her husband was on the point of leaving the country to avoid paying his debts. The enamored debtor was, of course, promptly arrested, and the threatened blow to his wife's domestic felicity was effectually averted. This ingenious "wrinkle" ought to have originated in the United States, although, if we may believe those to whom Indiana is a kind of Mecca, when men really wish to take themselves off in such a way, their wives should be only too happy to let them go.

We have received the following additional contributions for the Children's Aid Society: M., $10; A Nurse, $2; K. C. B., $20, and $10 with the following letter:

MARTINSBURG, N. Y., Monday, Jan. 22, 1872.
To the Editor of the New-York Times:

We have read in the newspapers about the Children's Aid Society, and how that it was in want of money, because Mr. TWEED and others had got what should have been paid to it. We live a good ways from New-York, and our parents don't give us much more money than we think we need, so buy things we can do without, it seems wrong to spend all we have given to us for corns, when so many poor boys and girls in New-York are without anything to eat, or clothes enough to keep them warm. We send you a Post-office order for $10, which we want you to send to the Children's Aid Society.

SIDNEY W. SYLVESTER,
GRANT SYLVESTER,
Aged fourteen and seven.

Rather a novel case of breach of promise was tried in the Wayne, Mich., Circuit Court some short time since. A divorced wife named MARY A. DEXTER sought substantial damages at the hands of a very respectable jury for the failure of a master brickmaker, named ANDREW MONROE, to make good his promise of marriage. In some respects the case was not unlike the celebrated one of Bardell vs. Pickwick. Mrs. DEXTER, it appears, has a lively daughter, who is now verging upon her tenth year. MONROE had once the misfortune to take this young lady upon his knee and ask her, confidentially, of course, how she would be disposed toward him provided he became her father. Counsel for the plaintiff submitted this circumstance as evidence of his intention; but the jury did not seem to think that Mrs. DEXTER had suffered much by the disappointment, and after ten minutes' deliberation, returned into Court with a verdict for five hundred dollars. Now, the most extraordinary part of the story consists in the fact that Mrs. DEXTER had been divorced from her first husband because of his neglect and cruelty; and the first wife of MONROE had obtained her release from the galling chain of matrimony for precisely the same reason. After this exhibit we are inclined to place more faith in the mot of the "Rocky Mountain Statesman," that most of the Western people get divorces for the excitement of the thing, and that they remarry in order to have another chance of going through the Courts.

The Lord Chamberlain, or Mr. WILLIAM BODHAM DONNE—for in the multiplicity of cross-explanations it is impossible to say which is actually responsible—will not suffer political allusions to remain in plays sent in for license in London. They order such things differently, if not better, in Paris. There is to be straightway brought out at the Porte St. Martin a new opera bouffe called "Le Roi Carotte." The music is by OFFENBACH, of course, and the hero is no other than his Majesty, the Ex-Emperor, NAPOLEON III. It must be humiliating to French pride to know that the original purpose was to make the German Emperor the central figure of this work. He was to have been depicted as less like ALEXANDER than the famous "Robber"—a kind of cross, in short, between General Bum and Robert Macaire. Much of his "business" was to consist in carrying off pianos and clocks, and, altogether, he was to be made as odious and absurd as possible. But M. SARDOU, the manager, got a hint that this could not be. President THIERS has a wholesome horror of a certain heavy hand, the hand of a "Prince without a Principality," the bitter severity of whose touch France already knows too well. Hence the conqueror of Sedan, and not the conqueror, is to be made the chief butt for OFFENBACH's melodious fleers, and "Le Roi Carotte" is to do for the Napoleonic dynasty what "Le Roi d'Yvetot" did for that of Orleans.

Mark Twain's Lecture.

"Mark Twain," delivered a meteorological, historical, topographical, geological, zoological, and comical lecture last night at Steinway Hall, for the benefit of his hearers and the Mercantile Library Association. The effort—which seemed to require no effort at all on the part of the humorous story-teller—was all about "Roughing It" out in Nevada, the land of sage hens, Mexican bloods, mountain sheep, alkali dust and duels. The lecturer related his narrative to a crowded house. He was repeatedly applauded, and won the sympathy of the audience when he said that he differed from GEORGE WASHINGTON, who could not tell a lie. "As for me," said Twain, "I can, but I won't." The lecture was a decided success, and mean gratified all who heard it.

Tweed, Hall and Connolly.

TWEED was at his office the greater part of the day yesterday, busily engaged. Mayor HALL was at his office in the City Hall conducting the usual routine work, while CONNOLLY still remains quite with his friends.

OUR STATE INSTITUTIONS—XIX.

The Buffalo Live Stock Trade.

How many of the good people of New-York are sufficiently imbued with bucolic tendencies as to have visited Brooklyn the ruddy labyrinth of the Communipaw Cattle Market? Not many, I imagine. And, of those who have been there, I should think none have been tempted to face its noisy confusion and bustle, its anything but fragrant odors and its drunken drovers, on a second occasion. But, this Buffalo cattle market is quite another sort of thing. Here, with the exception of the lowing of the cattle, an occasional neigh from some unsophisticated Western-bred colt, and the incessant quarreling, grunting and squealing in the hog-pens, all is quiet, orderly, and business-like. Above all, the place is kept marvelously clean, considering the purposes for which it is used. But then, it is a model cattle market. On a busy morning, as was the case when I visited the stock-yards to-day, one would be half inclined to think that all the fat bulls of Basan had been suddenly brought to life again, or that, at least, their lusty descendants were bellowing on every side; or that one was dreaming of the long by-gone days of Saul and Jonathan, and the innumerable flocks of "the best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs," which they resided from the rich pasture lands of Agag, King of the Amalekites, and which afterward caused them such a terrible overhauling from the Prophet Samuel. But—pork quickly recalls the wandering imagination. Those thousands of fat, bristly hogs can form no portion of the spoils of Saul. The seasoned, spicy sausage, the tender cutlet with sauce Robert, were luxuries perhaps hungered after, but religiously abstained from, by the Jews. It is related of the Baroness ROTHSCHILD—I mean the great stock-jobbing Baroness, who promoted some of her husband's most successful speculations on the London Stock Exchange fifty years ago—that, while driving one day over Hampstead Heath, one of her carriage horses was thrown down by running over a pig which lay sleeping in the middle of the road. Omen of disaster! But the Baroness was equal to the occasion. She at one descended from her carriage, and dispatched a courier on horseback with a note to her husband in Threadneedle-street, simply ordering him to sell short one million of consols. He cleared £150,000 by the transaction. NAPOLEON had escaped from Elba a few days before. What a sample of the lordly woman of the period! Soreds should hold annual meetings in DELMONICO's parlor in her honor, and drink in solemn silence (if so much-desired a consummation be possible) to the repose of her manes in unlimited cups of black tea.

But about this Buffalo live stock trade. Revenons à nos moutons. The Buffalo stock yards were planned, laid out and inclosed eight years ago by the New-York Central Railroad Company. They cover a space of ground thirty-eight acres in extent, in the outlying district of the city known as East Buffalo, about three miles from the central portion of the city, and immediately adjacent to the Company's main track. The original yards, however, were utterly insignificant in size, in their buildings, and conveniences compared with those which the rapidly-growing trade has necessitated. They were burned down in 1865, but were immediately rebuilt. The business of the yards, however, suffered little or no interruption, for by the most strenuous efforts, and the employment of an army of carpenters and workmen, the yards were so far restored in less than two days as to be able to receive cattle in a makeshift sort of way. A few days more and the rebuilding was completed. Since that time they have again and again been enlarged, and yet it will not be long before increased accommodation will be required. The Buffalo cattle market supplies Albany, New-York, Boston, and all the towns and cities in New-York State and New-England; and the supply, great as it is, is often so unequal to the demand as to cause a sudden and very unwelcome advance in prices in those markets. Mr. Peckaniff would petulantly exclaim: "How those boys do eat!" New-York housekeepers bless (?) the butcher, and the more irreverent butcher openly and loudly curses the unoffending Buffalo Cattle Market. The Central Railroad people, however, do not manage or control the stock-yards. They have leased them to Mr. LEMUEL L. CROCKER, of this City, and it is to that gentleman's well-judged efforts alone that Buffalo owes gratitude for her exceedingly well-kept-up and well-managed stock-yards.

The stock-yards are in three divisions—the cattle-yards, the sheep-house and the hog-pens. The cattle-yards are 125 in number, well covered and protected from the westerly gales, and provided with every accommodation for housing, feeding, and watering six thousand head of cattle at the same time. The animals are brought in the cars, on a short branch line from the main track, immediately up to the gates of the yards. This is the moment of all others that the astute dealer likes to make a bargain—the beasts weighing over a hundred-weight more after they have been fed and watered. The amount of water they will drink is wonderful. The scale clerk told me that they once had the curiosity to weigh a bullock before and after drinking. The increase of weight was a little over sixty pounds. This can hardly be called sipping. The sheep-house is one of the finest and largest of its kind in the United States. It is 1,050 feet long and one hundred feet wide, and has sufficient pens to accommodate seventy-five double-decked car-loads of sheep, taking the average of the load throughout the year to be two hundred. When the wool is heavy, the number is less; after shearing, they pack much closer. The pens are very large, and are provided with interior pens, so that when the drover has got his flock in, he and his assistants can sort and classify the good, bad, and indifferent. In the week preceding the last 4th of July they had 17,400 sheep in this building. The sheep-house is more substantially constructed and is built for greater warmth than the cattle-yards, and has all modern appliances for the proper care of sheep. The hog-pens are under the management of Messrs. MERCALF & CUSHING. There are ninety of them. They also are entirely covered in, and have room for eighteen thousand hogs. MERCALF & CUSHING, besides being extensive dealers and commission agents, (they often ship over a hundred car loads of hogs a month,) have a slaughtering and packing-house close by. They have an ingenious method (not unknown in Cincinnati and elsewhere) of giving master hog his quietus with very little trouble and no kicking. Over a gutter trough, and about nine feet from the ground, is a strong bar of iron on which wheel-pullies with pendant chains and hooks run. Ten hogs at a time are driven into a small pen connected by a narrow passage with the slaughtering room. In this pen a boy puts a strong chain with a ring at the end round one of the hind legs of the hog. The chain is attached to the pulley which is at the other end of the building, and in a moment before he has time to think that something is the matter, the hog finds himself hoisted and sliding along the bar. As the hogs pass one after another the butcher performs his office without the slightest trouble, the very weight of the hog preventing his struggling. There are, also, five slaughter-houses in the City, where two thousand hogs are killed on an average every week.

The stock-yards have their own water-works; a twenty-two horse-power engine being constantly at work pumping water from a well of good water. The yards are also provided with a complete system of sewers. A main sewer runs through them, and branch sewers from every yard connect with it. Consequently the atmosphere is far more pure than might be thought possible in a locality where such a business is carried on. There is, of course, a certain amount of odor; but not sufficient to cause annoyance. There is a hydrant in every yard, and no stint is shown in the use of water. The same with feed, of which the annual consumption is something enormous. All stock going east is compelled by law to be rested, fed, and watered at Buffalo, even if they are only passing through direct to Albany or New-York. There are four capacious barns for the storage of hay, corn, &c. The other buildings belonging to the stock-yards are a large brick-built office for transacting the immediate business of the management of the yards, a boarding-house for the men employed in them—seventy or eighty in number—telegraph and railroad offices, and stables for the horses of the establishment.

Across the road, directly opposite the yards, is Mr. CROCKER's banking-house and drovers' exchange. The banking business is on a large scale—about twelve million dollars a year; though this is only a small part of the heavy payments which are made in cattle transactions. About eight million dollars of this sum is money actually banked by the dealers and drovers; the remainder is money paid in to be remitted to the stock-raisers. The mode of doing business is often of a very primitive character. The drovers are mostly illiterate men. Some can neither read nor write. Of two brothers, the buy and sell on a very large scale, and have accumulated a capital of $500,000, one cannot write at all; the other can just manage to sign his name in a sort of Tony Weller caligraphy. The payments are often managed in this simple fashion: Two drovers will approach the cashier and one will say, "Put $500," or whatever the sum to be transferred may be, "to this man's account." No check is passed, no receipt is given. And yet Mr. BECKER, the manager of the Bank, says that he has never known an instance of a disputed account. He says that the drovers, though rough and uncouth in manner and appearance, are, with few exceptions, scrupulously honest. He knows well all the exceptions, and guards himself against them. Again a drover will come in, say that he has got cattle in the yards, and ask for a few hundred dollars till he sells them. It is rare for Mr. BECKER to ask for any memorandum or security, though in a few instances he will lay an embargo on the cattle till the loan is repaid. On my remarking, "that seems to be a very loose mode of doing business," he replied: "The class of men we deal with is a peculiar one; they are so ignorant and unbusiness-like that we could not get along unless we transacted their business in their own way."

Your modern drover is a delightfully peculiar being: all muffler, fur cap and boots; very silent except when driving a recalcitrant drove of cattle, and very wise-looking when contemplating some unusually fine specimen of the bovine species, and speculating as to his probable weight. As to fins, the drovers will often make little pools among themselves, and none of them will be more than fifty pounds out in estimating the weight of a two thousand-pound bullock. As I have said, they carry on their business after the most primitive fashion. They keep no books or accounts, but part with their cattle and walk off with the proceeds. In complicated transactions they consult Mr. CROCKER, in whom they repose the most implicit confidence, and whose word to them is gospel. This confidential relationship is the result of the adoption of a very wise course on the part of Mr. CROCKER. In spite of his technical and practical knowledge of cattle, and the opportunities which his position naturally throws in his way of making highly-remunerative bargains in cattle, he has always steadily avoided any such temptation. Consequently, as he neither buys nor sells, nor ever takes a share in the profits on a transaction managed by others, the drovers regard him as a totally disinterested, though thoroughly competent judge, to whom they can apply for advice, or to act as arbitrator between one another, without a possible chance of detriment to themselves, and so the business goes on, growing as it goes.

Now let us see what the extent of this Buffalo live stock business is. In 1871 the receipts at the yards over the Lake Shore, Michigan and Southern Railroad were 290,000 head of cattle, 321,000 sheep, 834,000 hogs, and 19,300 horses. The Grand Trunk brought 20,000 cattle, 110,000 sheep, 3,000 hogs, and 800 horses; the Suspension Bridge and Erie Junction: 68,000 cattle, 97,000 sheep, 47,000 hogs and 300 horses; the New-York Central 2,000 cattle, 9,500 sheep, 300 hogs and 100 horses; a total of 380,000 head of cattle, 540,500 sheep, 884,300 hogs and 13,500 horses. In the same year the shipments over the New-York Central Railroad were: 244,000 cattle, 340,000 sheep, 470,000 hogs and 8,500 horses. The shipments over the Erie Road were 113,000 cattle, 140,000 sheep, 300,000 hogs, and 9,500 horses; a total of 357,000 head of cattle, 480,000 sheep, 770,000 hogs and 11,000 horses.

The receipts at the yards for 1871 comprised 1,628,300 of all kinds of stock. The estimated value of this enormous supply of food is $47,500,000—$34,600,000 for cattle, $2,300,000 for sheep, and $10,600,000 for hogs. It is impossible to include horses in this valuation. They vary so in price as to preclude the possibility of forming any approximate estimate. But if they sold for only $100 all round, it would add $1,350,000 to the grand total. Of course, all the stock unloaded is not sold here. Many dealers, dissatisfied with the market prices ruling here, will reload their stock and ship it to Albany or New-York. But of the 380,000 head of cattle received in 1871, one-half changed hands in Buffalo. About three-quarters of the 540,500 sheep received were sold here; and about 350,000 out of the 880,000 hogs. The cattle mostly come from Texas, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Kentucky and Ohio; and, with the exception of about 30,000 sold for home consumption, are either sold to buyers from the great Eastern markets—chiefly Albany, New-York and Brighton, (the Boston cattle-market,)—or pass through, in first hands, to these cities. About one-half of the sheep come from Canada; the remainder from different Western States. They also are shipped to the Eastern markets. The home consumption of cattle is small. The hogs mostly all come from the Western States. Large numbers of them are slaughtered here, and shipped to the packers in New-York. Some of the hog-dealers have partners in New-York engaged in the packing business. The bulk of the hogs find their way, head or alive, to the packers in New-York. All the cattle coming in or going out are weighed by Mr. CROCKER's subordinates, in going out, under the supervision of the railroad freight officials. On arrival they are driven into pens by car-loads, and each drove is weighed separately on one of FAIRBANKS' great platform scales. This scale weighs four car-loads of cattle at one time, each car carrying seventeen head at a time. It will weigh up to 80,000 pounds. The animals are driven in at one end, and out at the other. Thus the process of weighing goes on very rapidly. When shipments by rail are made, the cattle are driven through ascending passages which rise to the level of the floor of the car, and open immediately on to its door. There is, therefore, little trouble in getting the cattle into the cars. For getting sheep about the yards, or in and out of the cars, they have two decoy animals to lead the way. The others, of course, follow.

It may not be uninteresting to note the rapid growth of this live-stock trade. It is shown by the following table for the last fifteen years:

Receipts in	Cattle.	Sheep and Lambs.	Hogs.
1857	108,000	307,000	117,000
1860	187,000	145,000	85,000
1869	313,000	307,000	498,000
1870	388,000	580,000	740,000
1871	380,000	540,500	884,300

The falling off for the year 1869 was principally caused by the marked decrease in the supply of sheep and hogs from Canada, the Canadians thinking that the coming war would cause a considerable advance in prices and holding back their stock. Some curious changes have occurred in prices during the last year, especially in hogs, which have fallen considerably in consequence of the largely increased growing of corn by the Western farmers. In 1870 cattle ranged from $4 25 to $10 12 per 100 pounds; sheep and lambs from $3 10 to $9, and hogs from $6 35 to $7 25. In 1870 prices ranged for cattle from $4 13 to $6 85; for sheep and lambs from $4 25 to $7; hogs from $4 30 to $4 60. The busiest months in the trade are in the latter part of the year, when the Chicago trade begins to fall off.

The principal shippers and dealers are, in cattle: I. & D. Weixel, Livingston & Rosanthal, B. C. Coon, S. Sidnaz, W. V. Woods & Co., and H. Monroe, who, to a great extent, supplies the Brighton market. B. C. Coon, Henry Rankin, C. F. Reynolds and M. B. Doty also do a large commission business. For sheep, the leading men are E. Swope, P. Pfeiffer and I. H. Kerr. In hogs the principal shippers are Charles White & Co., Crane & Davis and W. W. Tilden & Co., all of New-York. The commission merchants are Metcalfe & Cushing, E. Swope, I. Pfeiffer and Kerr & Thompson. A. P.

From an American Abroad.

The following is an extract from the letter of a well-known American, at present on a visit abroad:

"I see that the people who defeated CHASE in the Democratic Convention in 1868, because they did not wish to have such a seal of condemnation put upon their treasonable and pro-slavery sympathies, are now trying again to put off the day of popular judgment upon their course by seducing disaffected Republicans to nominate some one against GRANT whom they can support, and not have a candidate or resolutions of their own. I hope SUMNER and TRUMBULL will keep out of the trap. The Democrats who are conducting this intrigue, if I understand it, will encourage Republicans with promise of Democratic support till the Republicans and their candidates are thoroughly compromised, and at their mercy; then they will say, 'Before we go any further on this road, let us understand what your President is going to do for us; which is to be in the Cabinet, which are to be foreign Ministers, and which Collectors, Postmasters, &c.' Nor can SCHURZ & Co. help themselves. They must yield. They will be defeated ignominiously at last, and then they will be compelled, like GRANT, to take their traps and travel into the camp of the Democratic Party to fellowship with their life-long adversaries.

The Democrats who, under the lead of MONTGOMERY BLAIR and the Missouri Republican are getting up this intrigue, fancy that they can keep their party from making a nomination—suspend its breath for four years—or at least till the election is over. If that were possible, which I do not believe, it would be as fatal to the life of the party as if those gentlemen were to suspend their own breath for the same period. 'You make believe die,' says an old proverb I once heard in Hayti, 'and I will make believe bury you.' Such a step, if it were possible to take it, would send the Democratic Party to the limbo of the Know-nothing Party and the Temperance Party. I can understand how hard it is for SUMNER and TRUMBULL, not to speak of others less prominent at this moment, to assist in the re-election of GRANT, but their opposition will resolve in last analysis into personal reasons of which the mass of the nation will take no note. The Administration of Gen. GRANT has been on the whole one of the most satisfactory. I think it is not too much to say the most satisfactory of any since you or I have been acquainted with public affairs.

The public revenue has been collected and appropriated to the payment of the public debt with a fidelity which, for the first time in many years, no one contests.

The adjustment of our differences with England was a masterpiece of diplomacy, and does honor to all concerned in it. Since the Treaty of Paris of 1783, I know of nothing more cleverly managed in the department of our foreign relations.

The Christian policy of the President toward the Indians, a policy without precedent in our history, promises to be one of the most auspicious features of his Administration, and one for which the credit will be due to him more than to any other person, for I doubt if there was another officer in the army that did not regard it with contempt.

He is the first President that has dared to touch the leprosy of Mormonism, and take effective measures for relieving the country of one of its most loathsome diseases. Early in his administration he brought about the tranquilization of the South and the passage of the Fifteenth Amendment by the judicious combination of firmness and toleration, and is now administering the Ku-klux powers invested in him by the last Congress, as it seems to me, with great discretion. I judge so, because that is the part of his conduct about which the traitors of 1861 make most noise. Now, against these facts, it is idle to talk about San Domingo, out of which he backed in pretty good order, or of his fondness for cigars, for presents, or for rich and generous hosts, or for TOM MURPHY and FRANK HOWE. I might as well complain of the Providence that sends us Summer weather because they wet my hay before it was housed. The people will not listen to personal detraction in the presence of so much matter for national satisfaction. With, as you know, no great personal partiality for GRANT, and as clear perceptions of his shortcomings for the Presidency as most men, I cannot help feeling that his re-election is the wisest thing possible for us.

NEW-JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

A New Fishing Regulation—Superior Bitches.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TRENTON, Tuesday, Jan. 24, 1872.

No business of general importance has today been transacted in either House. A considerable number of bills were introduced in the Senate, but with one or two exceptions were only of local interest. Mr. MOORE introduced a bill relative to Filetage, making it lawful for any citizen of this State who is the registered master of any vessel to act as her own pilot in coming in or going out of the navigable waters of the State, or over which it has concurrent jurisdiction. This bill, if passed, will interfere seriously with the business of New-York pilots.

RIPARIAN LANDS.

The old question of the right of the States to the submerged lands on the shores of the Hudson and other New-York waters is to be re-opened. For some years past the New-Jersey Central Railroad has been engaged in filling in and docking out upon those lands at Communipaw, where it now has a property, reclaimed by it from the water worth millions of dollars. Their right to those lands, it is claimed, was obtained under a grant made to the American Land and Improvement Company; but some of those who hold that the title to all submerged lands is in the State, insist that this claim is not well founded, and it is now proposed to enact some measure which will compel the Company to make compensation to the State Treasury, or become liable to expulsion for trespass. The question is an involved and intricate one, and it is, perhaps, safe to question the success of any movement which would, in its practical operation, seriously disturb the business or jeopardize the franchises of any existing corporation.

THE CASE OF BOYTE.

Gov. PARKER this afternoon notified the counsel of the murderer BOYTE that he had decided not to grant the reprieve applied for. Considerable pressure has been brought upon the Governor to induce him to interfere in behalf of the condemned, but he has not been able to see his way clear to do so. His decision will be very generally approved throughout the State.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A bill is to be introduced appropriating one hundred thousand dollars toward the erection of the new Lunatic Asylum, the total cost of which is estimated at seven hundred thousand dollars. The Senate today passed the joint resolutions favoring the purchase of Independence Hall in Philadelphia by the General Government, but refused to appoint a committee to bear the resolutions to Washington. Gov. PARKER will send in his first nominations some time next week.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

A Brutal Crime in Brooklyn—A Man Assaulted with a Slung-Shot, Killed and Robbed—The Police Entirely Ignorant of the Transaction.

On Tuesday evening, JOHN B. PANORMO, a music teacher, residing at the corner of Pineapple and Fulton streets, Brooklyn, was brutally beaten in, it is supposed, one of the cars of the Myrtle-avenue line, and received injuries from the effects of which he died yesterday afternoon. He left his boarding-house about 8 o'clock to give a lesson to a pupil at No. 41 Cumberland-street. He left that place at 10 o'clock, and in twenty minutes after entered his boarding-house covered with blood and very weak. He told the landlady that he had been beaten in the car, that the conductor dared not interfere to protect him, and that he was let out at Pineapple-street as he desired. The wounds appear to have been made with a slung-shot. The only account which Mr. PANORMO was able to give is that a man, who sat beside him, had struck and robbed him. The conductor of the car on which Mr. PANORMO rode to his residence, states that he was let out at Sackett-street, and that he left Greenpoint at 9:31 on Tuesday evening, and reached Myrtle-avenue at 10:01. From that point to Cumberland-street would occupy about ten minutes. The conductor states that he saw a man get on his car about Cumberland-street, holding his handkerchief to his head. After he took his seat in the rear, the conductor observed that the man's head was bleeding, and spoke to him, saying, "My dear Sir, you have been hurt; had I not better stop the car and assist you to a drug-store?" Mr. PANORMO replied in the negative, and in reply to further inquiries, stated that he lived in Pineapple-street, and wanted to stop there. The passengers gathered around Mr. PANORMO, offering him assistance, but he declined their offers. Soon after the conductor came forward for his fare, when Mr. PANORMO paid it, and then appeared to discover that he had lost his watch, and thought that he had dropped it in the car. The passengers assisted in the search, but could not find it. On arriving at Pineapple-street, the car was stopped, and Mr. PANORMO got off and went to his dwelling, which he ascended, walked up stairs, and then told the landlady, Mrs. Snow, that he had been struck, as related above. He repeated the same statement to a friend who called upon him yesterday morning.

The only reasonable theory in regard to this affair is that Mr. PANORMO was struck by a slung-shot and robbed of his watch, and then that he escaped from his assailant, ran to Myrtle-avenue and got upon the first car that was passing; that, being partially stunned by the blow or blows, he fancied that he had been assaulted in the car, and carried that impression to his dying moments. There were policemen on the back platform of the car at the time, but he paid no attention to Mr. PANORMO, and indeed it does not appear that he was applied to by any one on the car to give aid to the man.

No. 41 Cumberland-street, which was visited by Mr. PANORMO, is situated between Myrtle- and Park avenues. It is a two-story and basement frame house, located on the rear of the lot, and is occupied by two families, named DONALDSON and SCOTT. Mr. SCOTT's family consists of himself, wife, and a son about fifteen years of age. Mr. PANORMO gave this son lessons on his piano, and the lesson of Tuesday evening was the third of the course. After giving him the lesson, Mr. PANORMO left the house—the lad accompanying him to the gate—and went toward Myrtle-avenue. The lad states that the street was free from pedestrians at the time, and after seeing Mr. PANORMO depart he returned to the house. A son of Mr. DONALDSON, and a young lady friend, had been to a concert on Tuesday evening, and on their return arrived at the corner of Myrtle-avenue and Cumberland-street soon after 10 o'clock. They walked there for a few moments for old acquaintances to some friends, and then passed on down Myrtle-avenue. While they stood on the corner they observed nothing unusual along Cumberland-street. The Police have examined the street carefully from No. 41 to the corner of Myrtle-avenue, and can discover no trace of blood or anything to indicate that any assault has been committed.

The case is involved in mystery, and no hopes are entertained that it will be cleared up by investigation. Mr. PANORMO was assaulted somewhere on Cumberland-street between Park and Myrtle avenues, on this side of the church, and near where a building is being erected. It is supposed that the murderer secreted himself near those buildings, and as Mr. PANORMO passed the assault was committed. On Monday nights Mr. PANORMO gave a concert at the Brooklyn Institute, and on Tuesday morning went to a Mr. BAILS, on Myrtle-avenue, where he collected the proceeds of his concert. It is supposed that one or more of the gang of ruffians who infest that section of the city knew of his having obtained the money, and waylaid him for the purpose of robbery. Mr. PANORMO was an Englishman, about thirty-five years of age, and was small in stature. Until recently he had a conservatory of music on Fulton-street, between Johnson and Tillary, and devoted himself to teaching the piano and playing for parties, concerts, &c. He was unmarried, and is represented to have been very correct in his habits.

The conduct of the officer who was on the back platform of the car when Mr. PANORMO got on is reprehensible. It is supposed that his name is PRICE, and that he belongs to the Fourth Precinct. His duty clearly was to have examined Mr. PANORMO, and ascertain if he was injured by his injuries; and if he found that he was dangerously wounded the alarm should have been given at once. The Police of the Fourth Precinct are endeavoring to solve the mystery which surrounds this case, with what success the events of today will determine. The affair has shocked the community and aroused the utmost indignation at the apparent insecurity of life which this and other recent tragedies has revealed. The Coroner should make a most searching investigation into this matter, and endeavor to discover the cowardly murderer. He will today offer a reward for the apprehension of the murderer. This may stimulate the Police.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

OPERA BOUFFE AT LINA EDWIN'S.

"Les Brigands" was brought out at Lina Edwin's Theatre, last evening, by Mlle. Aimée and the actress she has gathered about her. As numerous an audience as the pretty little house can contain was packed into it, and the assemblage was of a quality, so to speak, worthy of a festival of Italian opera. The story of "Les Brigands," and the characteristics of Offenbach's score, were dealt with at some length when they were heard at the Grand Opera-house. The libretto is interesting and the dialogue amusing it is a shame that the performances of few burlesques have attained to, and the music is not only vivacious and tuneful, but occasionally discreet, and at a value unknown by slightness treatment. The words and the melodies had full justice done them by the company rendering them last night, and though the entertainment was not free from blemishes, the general impression was stronger even than that wrought by the most successful rehearsals of the present season. Mlle. AIMÉE, who first personated Fiorella when "Les Brigands" was produced in Paris, is the ideal representative of that improbable and captivating creature. The character does not admit the broad fun which the lady throws into other assumptions we might name, but it exists a thoroughly good conception and an occasion of exceptional animation and humor. That Mlle. AIMÉE has all the needed qualities was abundantly proven to those spectators who failed to witness her previous labors in the same rôle. Her singing, from the sculpiote introductory of the brigand's daughter to the resumption of the air at the close of the piece, was all that could be desired, and her delivery of "Mandolinata," in Italian, during the progress of the opera, was only one out of half a dozen incidents that suggested imperative encores. Mlle. DUBOIS appeared to great advantage as Fragoletto, and gave voice to the relatively difficult numbers of the part with a sweety and an effect hardly to be expected. M. NOE was a handsome and manly Falsacappa, but is scarcely so well suited to the interpretation of the music, written for the finest execution of M. DUPUIS, as was M. GAUSINS, of whose merit no just opinion could be formed on the vast stage which he was compelled to fill. M. DUCOMMES portrayed Pietro, the aged bandit, with abundant humor, but with a redundancy of "business," to which some objection can fairly be taken. In the episode of the troubles of a cashier, M. EUGARD as Antonio, diffused, as might have been predicted, much merriment. The remaining characters were assumed by MM. BERNARD, JULIEN and VALZEM, and by Mlle. IDOZA, a buxom lass to opera bouffe and a young lady, whose vocal achievements are more creditable than her acting. Among the points of the performance that elicited most applause were the finale of the first act, which would not be out of place in a more pretentious composition than "Les Brigands," and the lamp song in act iii., which was done thrice. The bill at Lina Edwin's is to be unchanged until further notice.

THE CHURCH MUSIC ASSOCIATION.

The public rehearsals for the second concert of the season, at Steinway Hall, at 3 o'clock, begin this day. The works to be performed at the next concert are the overture, by MEYERBEER, to "Struensee," MOZART's Requiem in D Minor, as advertised some months since, and a selection from WALLACE's "Lurline." There will be 300 voices in the chorus, and to give additional effect to the operatic selection the orchestra will be increased to eighty instruments. The principal parts will be taken by Mme. REV. DR. J. D. BRADLEY, D. D.

His Formal Reception Into the Roman Catholic Communion—Impressive Services at St. Stephen's Church—His Profession of Faith—Sermon by Rev. Dr. McGlynn.

Rev. JOSHUA D. BRADLEY, D. D., lately pastor of the Oratory of St. Sacrament, (Protestant Episcopal,) in Forty-third-street, whose announcement, made there on Sunday last by himself, that he had given in, unreservedly, his adhesion to the Roman Catholic Church, created such a sensation in religious circles, was yesterday publicly and formally received into the Catholic communion. The reception ceremonies took place in St. Stephen's Church, in Twenty-eighth-street, and were conducted by Rev. Dr. McGLYNN, the pastor of St. Stephen's.

The services began at 4 o'clock. Rev. Mr. BRADLEY was habited in a simple cassock and sat in front of the altar, a number of Catholic clergymen, vested in cassock and surplice, occupying seats on either side of the sanctuary. Rev. Dr. McGLYNN knelt on the altar steps, engaged in silent prayer, when the ceremonies were commenced by the choir singing the Veni Creator Spiritus, an invocation that the Holy Ghost might descend on the congregation and inspire the services. This being finished, Dr. McGLYNN ascended the altar and read from the sixteenth chapter of St. Matthew, from the thirteenth to the nineteenth verses inclusive, where our Savior declares that His Church is founded on Peter, and that the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it. He proceeded then to speak his discourse, being received with earnest attention by the auditory, and in many cases it was observed that (among the ladies especially) tears were being shed, especially when the reverend Doctor tendered his congratulations to the new convert. At the close of Dr. McGLYNN's remarks, Rev. Dr. BRADLEY accompanied an officer side by side, ascended the alter steps, and, kneeling on the topmost one, beside Rev. Dr. McGLYNN, read in a loud, clear voice, his profession of faith, after the formula laid down in the Roman Missal, known more particularly as the creed of Pope Pius IV. The substance of it was: An abjuration of all and every doctrine he had ever held or taught that conflicted with the teaching of the Holy Roman Church; his entire, unreserved, and unqualified belief in every dogma and article of faith which the Catholic Church teaches; his unequivocal acknowledgment of the supremacy of the Holy See in matters of faith and morals; and the full avowal that the Holy Roman Church is the mother and mistress of all Christian Churches. In particular he avowed his belief in the trinity of the Godhead, the divinity of Christ, the power of the Church to forgive sins to such as are truly repentant, and in the articles of the Apostles Creed. In conclusion he placed his hand on the

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

A Pest House to be Vacated—Statistics of the Small-Pox Hospital—The Weekly Report on Contagious Diseases.

The Board of Health met yesterday, President Bosworth in the chair. It was ordered that the tenement-house No. 423 West Thirty-sixth-street be vacated by noon on the 27th inst., owing to the prevalence of small-pox on the premises, there having been nine persons removed from the house suffering from small-pox, and three other cases distinctly traced to them. After being vacated the building will be thoroughly disinfected and fumigated.

In compliance with a resolution passed by the Board at their last meeting, directing him to make inquiry as to the cases of small-pox received at the Small-pox Hospital from places other than the City of New-York, Dr. STEPHEN SMITH, Chairman of the Sanitary Committee, yesterday presented a report, from which it appears that during the year 1871, 832 cases of small-pox were received from other sources than New-York City and Quarantine. Of these, 629 were received from Ward's, Hart's and other islands. Of the remaining five, two came from Newark, two from Passaic and one from Brooklyn. These latter cases did not enter the hospital direct from places beyond the City, but either visited the Central Office, in Third-avenue, or were found in some public place in the early stages of the disease. The report was also accompanied by the following statistics, furnished by Dr. A. E. MACDONALD, chief of staff of the Small-pox Hospital on Blackwell's Island, for the year 1871: Admissions—1,334 males, 1,164 females; 1,097 native, 1,401 foreign. Deaths—921 males, 212 females; 308 native, 220 foreign. Remaining Jan. 1, 1871, 29; admitted during 1871, 2,498. Total treated 1871, 2,527. Percentage of deaths to patients treated for the year, 21.1. Remaining in hospital Jan. 1, 1872, 76 native, 91 foreign; 97 males, 75 females.

The report states that during the year the disease has been specially virulent.

The Sanitary Committee submitted the following report:

The vaccinating corps have visited 18,383 families, and performed 9,867 vaccinations, of which 894 were primary, and 8,973 secondary. During the past week the vaccinators have met with far less opposition to vaccination than at any previous time for a year past. In consequence, the total number of vaccinations has largely increased for the week. Special attention is also called to the fact of so large a number of primary vaccinations performed during the last week, thus showing that this important measure had been neglected among children.

The following is a comparative statement of contagious diseases reported for the two weeks ending Jan. 13 and 20, 1872:

	Fever.		Typhus.	Typhoid.	Scarlet.	Measles.	Cholera.	Dipth.	Small-pox.
Jan. 13	7	1	1	1	1	14	1	14	1
Jan. 20	6	0	0	0	73	34	11	19	0

Dr. CHARLES P. RUSSEL, Register of Records, reports as follows: During the past week there were registered 477 deaths, being 3 less than for the previous week, and 57 less than for the corresponding week of 1871. Zymotic diseases occasioned 131 deaths; constitutional, 96; local, 189; developmental, 61, and violent causes, 20. The fatal cases of small-pox increased from 20 to 28, and those of whooping cough from 14 to 19. The mortality of measles diminished from 5 to 0; that of scarlatina from 29 to 20; that of diphtheria and croup together from 21 to 15; that of typhoid fever from 7 to 6, and that of diarrheal affections from 24 to 23. Typhus fever caused 1 death, the same as in the preceding week. Two deaths were ascribed to spotted fever or cerebro-spinal meningitis. The deaths from phthisis-pulmonalis amounted to 71, against the same number in the previous week.

Capt. YELE, of the Sanitary Corps of Police, reports the following as the amount of meat, &c.: Sheep, 72; hogs, 26; veal, carcass, 1; veal, box, 29; poultry, 1,361 pounds, and meat, cut, 80 pounds.

The sanitary condition of the slaughter-houses of the City is good, with the exception of that of THOMAS LOUGHRAN, north side of Forty-seventh-street, east of First-avenue, and that of HENRY ESSER, north side of Forty-seventh-street, east of First-avenue. In these two cases the parties have been notified to clean their premises.

Burglars in Warren-Street—Arrest of the Thieves and the Recovery of the Property.

At about 6 o'clock yesterday morning, Mr. J. C. KINNER, who was formerly a member of the Police force, while passing through Canal-street, was attracted by the suspicious movements of two men, who each carried two well-filled leather traveling valises. He followed these men, and saw them enter the large tenement-house, No. 161 Varick-street. KINNER at once hurried to the residence of Detective FARLEY, of the Central Office, who at once accompanied him to the Varick-street tenement-house. Learning that there were no less than eight persons living on the second floor, they procured the assistance of two patrolmen of the Twenty-eighth Precinct Police, and made a raid on that room in which the men were known to have taken refuge. On forcing open the door, they found in the room the two men who had been previously watched by Mr. KINNER, and who were caught in the act of counting over several packages of pocket-knives. The men were secured and the room was searched, which resulted in unearthing 260 dozen pocket-knives. The house was then searched, and a quantity of burglars' tools was found and taken possession of by the Police. The prisoners and the property were taken to the Detective Office, where they gave their names as GEORGE BRANDT and JAMES WILLIAMS. BRANDT has been previously known to the Police as Walter Moffatt. The goods found in their possession were identified by Messrs. FREIDMANN & LAUTERJUNG, hardware merchants, of No. 14 Warren-street, and are valued at $1,200. Their store had been visited by burglars on Tuesday night, and the goods referred to above carried off. The prisoners are locked up at Police Head-quarters for the present.

A Hartford Burglary.

WM. KENNEY, a young man, was arrested yesterday morning by Capt. MCDERMOTT and Detective DUNN, of the Eighth Precinct, on a requisition from Gov. JEWELL, of Connecticut. KENNY stands charged with having on the night of Oct. 23 forced an entrance into the residence of Mr. A. B. GILLETTS, in Hartford, and carried away from the house $1,200 worth of wearing apparel and silver-ware. He was delivered to the officer from Hartford, who took him back to that city yesterday afternoon for trial.

FIRST MORTGAGE
GOLD BONDS.
THIRTY YEARS TO RUN, AND ISSUED FOR $20,000 PER MILE.
This road forms the shortest and most direct route from the great anthracite and semi-bituminous coal fields of Pennsylvania into the central part of this state, and will run in connection with the New-York Central Road, which it crosses at Cayuga Bridge. Traversing, as it does, the finest and most populous agricultural district, generally known as the "GARDEN OF THE STATE," its local traffic will be large, and its greatest source of revenue will be from the coal business. The road is being rapidly built, and will be in active operation during this year. From our knowledge of this enterprise, and after the most thorough investigation, we most confidently recommend the Bonds as a safe investment. We offer, for the present, the Bonds at 90 and accrued interest in currency.

THE WHARTON TRIAL ENDED

The Jury Return a Verdict of "Not Guilty."

Scenes in the Court-Room---Incidents Connected with the Trial.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 24.—At 10:10 o'clock, the Chief Judge was informed that the jury had agreed. The Court-room was soon filled by an eager crowd, but few ladies being present. At 10:20 o'clock Mrs. WHARTON and her daughter, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. J. CRAWFORD NEILSON, entered the Court-room. Mrs. HUGHES and Miss ROSA NEILSON were also present. Mrs. WHARTON, her daughter and her friends appeared in good spirits, as the favorable character of the verdict was known to them. At 10:25 the Chief-Judge directed that the jury be brought in.

Previous to the entry of the Jury in the Court-room, Chief-Judge MILLER admonished the audience that no manifestations of approval or disapproval would be permitted on the rendering of the verdict. After the Jury had arrived and taken their seats, for a few minutes a stillness and silence as solemn as ever witnessed at a deathbed scene pervaded the room. Mrs. WHARTON was standing in the prisoner's box, with Mr. CRAWFORD NEILSON at her side, and by them stood Miss NELLIE WHARTON, with Mr. THOMAS, one of the counsel. The oppressive silence was broken by the calling of the Jury by the Clerk, and their answering.

Col. HARWOOD, the clerk, then said: "Gentlemen of the jury, are you agreed upon your verdict?"

There was a nod of assent by the jurors.

CLERK—Who shall answer for you?

A JUROR—Our foreman.

Mrs. WHARTON was then directed to raise her right hand.

CLERK—Gentlemen of the jury, look upon the prisoner at the bar. How say you, is she guilty of the matter whereof she stands indicted, or not guilty?

The foreman, FRANKLIN DEALE, replied "not guilty."

As the foreman answered there was a slight manifestation of applause, which was instantly checked by the Court and bailiffs. Every eye was fixed upon the prisoner, who still stood calm, apparently unmoved, but through the heavy black crape vail tears could be seen streaming down her face, otherwise there was no sign of emotion. Miss NELLIE WHARTON wept and was deeply affected when Mrs. WHARTON left the prisoner's box. Mr. STEELE, Mr. THOMAS, and Mr. HAGNER, her counsel, each shook her hand with brief words of congratulation. Her friends present also took her hand, expressing gratification at the result of the trial. It is understood that before agreeing the jury stood eight for acquittal and four were not fully determined on their verdict. It was first decided they would agree and not go in to a hurry. During the time they were out five ballots were taken, after which a verdict of not guilty was agreed to. From the commencement to the close of the trial the case has been conducted with marked ability, equally in the matter of evidence and of argument. The State has been represented by Attorney-General SYBERT, assisted by Judges HAYNES and HAMMOND, three able jurists as sit upon the bench of the State. In every respect the trial has been impartial and ably conducted. There was no charge to the jury by the Court, the Constitution of Maryland containing a provision that in criminal cases the jury shall be judges of law as well as the facts. Before the Court was adjourned, it was understood between the Court and counsel that the trial of Mrs. WHARTON on an indictment for attempting to poison VAN NESS, would come off at the regular term of the Court in April. Mr. STEELE asked that the bail for her appearance be continued in that case with due consideration to the circumstances of Mrs. WHARTON. The Court fixed the bail at $5,000 on Mrs. WHARTON's personal recognizance, and $2,500 each of two securities. Mrs. WHARTON then acknowledged her recognizance, and Mr. NEILSON and Col. SPEAR, of Baltimore, as security for Mrs. WHARTON became security in $2,500 each. The Court then adjourned. Mrs. WHARTON left the room leaning on the arm of Mr. STEELE. She will remain a few days in Annapolis at the house of a friend.

It is now one month two weeks and five days since Mrs. WHARTON's trial began in Annapolis. She was arraigned in the Circuit Court for Anne Arundel County Dec. 4, 1871, having been indicted in Baltimore Aug. 14, 1871. Mrs. WHARTON was detained under arrest in her own house, on the 10th of July last, and six days afterward, the Grand Jury having made a formal presentment, she was conveyed to the Baltimore City Jail, where she remained until the 1st of December last, when she was removed to the Annapolis jail. She has therefore been in duress over six months, though her imprisonment, owing to the devotion of her daughter and the considerations of her custodians, has not been deprived of much of the dreary discomfort ordinarily experienced by persons under similar circumstances. Her trial has occupied forty-two days actually, in which time the theories of chemistry and medicine have been exhausted, as well as the law and the practitioners of all three of these learned professions. Over 100 witnesses have been examined for and against the accused, many of them from remote sections of the Union, including some of the most prominent army officers in the service of the Government, ladies and others. Probably a more exhaustive trial, a more tenacious defence, or vigorous prosecution, has never been witnessed in Maryland. It is estimated that the case cost the City of Baltimore fully $25,000. It will, it is understood, ruin the prisoner pecuniarily, for the charges she is at must be very great.

The Murderer of "Pet" Halsted.

GEORGE BOTTS, the murderer of "Pet" HALSTED, will, almost beyond a doubt, suffer the penalty of the law to-morrow. The Legislature has declined to act upon the proposed new law so long as it could affect his case. The members think that since the Courts at which he was tried, the Court of Appeals and the Governor have refused to act in the matter, they would only stultify themselves by interfering. The only hope of the prisoner is now with Gov. PARKER. Telegrams received at Newark yesterday were contradictory, some of them saying that the Governor had positively declined to act in the matter, and others that it was possible that a further reprieve might be granted. Yesterday the two married daughters of the prisoner visited him for the last time, and upon parting with him wept and threw their arms about him. Rev. Messrs. FISH, LEIGHFIELD, HUGHES and WEED yesterday called upon him, and he spent a large portion of the day in reading the Bible and in devotions.

The execution will take place in the main hallway of the jail. The scaffold has been once placed in position, posted and repaired, and will not be again put up in position until this evening.

The Broadway Concert-Saloons.

The raid of the Police upon the concert-saloons has had the effect of rendering the business extremely dull for the present. Last evening the different haunts along Broadway were comparatively deserted. The women were at work in a few of the saloons, but in the majority of cases the attendance was performed by boys, while a few of the "pretty waiter girls" sat around in their street costumes, with their hats on. The "Canterbury" and "Oriental" still kept up their display of lights, and the music was heard as usual, but otherwise very little was going on, and the bars did a very slim business. The raid has had the effect of increasing the numbers of the poor creatures to be found upon the streets. The keepers all say that they will reopen business as usual very soon.

Mayor Hall and the Union Club.

The Union Club has returned to Mayor HALL the dippant letter resigning his membership, which was lately published by his procurement. The Mayor insiniously manages in this letter to make up a record very favorable to himself, and this the Club authorities are not disposed to allow. He has been notified that if he chooses to resign in plain English, without circumlocution, he may do so, otherwise he will be expelled.

Fire in Trenton.

The private Summer residence of Gen. CADWALLADER, on the banks of the Delaware, at Trenton, was burned yesterday morning, and is supposed to have been robbed and set on fire, as the building was not occupied, and on entering it the firemen found the furniture and other contents of the building thrown about in the greatest confusion. The family were at their Winter residence in Philadelphia. The loss is about $10,000, two-thirds of which is on furniture. The building was a revolutionary landmark, having been built by Gen. CADWALLADER, of the Continental Army, at whose residence Gen. WASHINGTON and other leading men of that time were frequently entertained.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

The Water Board Controversy—Reply of Mr. William Beard.

The following are extracts from a response made by Mr. WILLIAM BEARD to the communications of the Chief Engineer and the contractors for the new reservoir:

"The answer to all the criticisms on my prices for the work is simple and conclusive. I am willing to stand by my proposal and abundantly able to do it. I am a competent judge of what is to be done and what it is worth, and have made my estimate after a careful examination of the plans in the office and the work on the ground. The flippant offer of Mr. KINGSLEY to give me the excavation at thirty-five cents a yard, was only made to be rejected. I do not take sub-contracts. But if the Water Board or the city will award me this contract at my figures, I will assume all the conditions and specifications which now bind him, except, of course, the blackmail payments. As to the project of this reservoir, I cannot give it any approval. It is uncalled for, injudicious in its details, and needlessly expensive. If any deficiency really existed, an engine could be established in connection with Smith's pond, which has a very large outlet, at the cost of two years' interest of the sum they propose to expend, and another year's interest in invested would simply pay for running it, as we do take care of the Summer demands for many years to come. The Water Board have not left themselves a leg to stand upon, either as to the propriety of the manner in which they have let this contract, or the propriety of the plan itself. Mr. McALLISTER, when called in, emphatically rejected the plan of a single high reservoir, 36½ feet above tide, which is now adopted, and insisted on a subdivision into three reservoirs, while he added a four-note to his report, condemning the whole idea of such storage. He knew, with the other engineers on this work, by experiment and study, the objections to be encountered; and, with an impending Water Board debt of over $10,000,000 over us, this is no time now for owners of real estate in Brooklyn to sanction the outlay of a single unnecessary or doubtful dollar."

Burglar Notes.

The house of OWEN MOGER, in Carroll-street, near Clinton, was robbed, last evening, of clothing to the amount of $200.

RODNEY RACKUS, formerly Deputy Auditor under JAMES O'BRIEN, fell off a plasta at the house of a friend in Third-avenue, near Thirty-second-street, on Tuesday night, and was killed.

Hon. THOMAS KINSELLA has addressed a letter to Messrs. ADAMS and DUNKLY and Dr. COCHRAN respecting the appointment of a cadet to the Military Academy at West Point. He asks them to examine candidates for the position and to report the result to him.

The Jeffersonian Democratic General Committee held a meeting last evening, and resolved to make their head-quarters at No. 320 Fulton-street. This Association is gaining strength daily, and will soon be a formidable rival to the General Committee which "Boss" McLAUGHLIN runs.

Health Officer COCHRAN gave a permit a few days ago for the transfer of some rags from New-York to Brooklyn. Yesterday he learned that the rags had been brought over on one of the Union ferry-boats, and he therefore caused them to be seized, and they are now lying at the foot of Baltic-street.

The jewelry store of JAMES McMURRAY, No. 329 Fulton-street, was entered by burglars on Tuesday night and robbed of silver-ware valued at $5,600. Entrance was effected by opening the basement door with a false key. ISAAC JONES and EDWARD WILDS were arrested late that evening on suspicion of having been engaged in the burglary. The former was arrested in Bond-street, and the latter in New-York. One of the parties sent a trunk to No. 97 Fulton-street yesterday morning, and the trunk has been seized. It is supposed to contain a part of the silver-ware stolen from the store.

THE BOWLING-GREEN BANK.

A Meeting of Depositors—Full Report of the Committee of Investigation—Fraudulent Loans and Fictitious Names.

A crowded meeting of the depositors of the Bowling-green Savings Bank was held on Tuesday night, in Greenwich-street, with Police Justice HOGAN in the chair. The object of the meeting was to hear the report of a committee of five appointed to investigate the state in which the business of the institution had been conducted, and to inquire into the acts of the officials. Mr. HOGAN prefaced the reading of the report by a few remarks, affirming the difficulty under which the Committee labored in obtaining facts and figures, and at the same time giving testimony to the high character of Mr. KNAPP, the receiver appointed by the Supreme Court. The speaker then proceeded to read the following report:

Your Committee find that there is due to depositors $445,000. Claims exist against the bank for the sum of $5,000. Examined securities held by said bank, and find books and mortgages which represent the sum of $74,679 12. Call loans, the sum of $24,000. Cash, which the bank holds the paper of borrowers. Out of this amount the undersigned believes that $137,700 of it is bad and worthless, which will leave as good the sum of $111,000 in Overdrafts, the sum of $10,000 of which the sum of $2,000 is bad and uncollectable, leaving $8,000 as good in the overdrafts. City stock, the sum of $2,000, although the bank records show that there should be the sum of $24,700 in City bonds. The Secretary of the bank, REEVES E. SELMES, has given to the receiver of the bank a deed of property which was purchased for the sum of $100,000, upon which there are mortgages of $102,000, leaving about $80,000 to be applied to the bank's assets. This statement shows a deficit of $62,012 81. Among the loans appears the sum of $45,000 charged against the Atlantic Avenue R. R., which amount the bank holds the paper of the Railroad Company. The Company, however, disputes the claim. The Guardian Savings Bank also claims that the Bowling-green Bank owes them the sum of $2,000 and interest, being amount drawn by the Secretary, REEVES E. SELMES, on his checks, which checks are held by the Guardian Bank against the Bowling-green Bank. If the Avenue C Railroad Company do not pay the amount charged to be due from them, the deficit will be increased by the sum of $42,000; and if the claim of the Guardian Savings Bank must be paid, it will be further increased by the sum of $24,000 and interest, making a total deficit of $128,012 81.

The undersigned further reports that among the call loans appears the names of persons, credited with large amounts, whom the receiver or your Committee have been unable to find. Your Committee believes that such loans purporting to have been made are fraudulent and that the names are fictitious.

E. T. HOGAN.

Mr. HOGAN further said he had that day discovered that the Secretary, REEVES E. SELMES, had carried off the vouchers, and if he did not return them in a few days criminal proceedings would be taken against him.

A very heated discussion then took place. Many of the depositors demanded from the Chairman the names of the officers of the bank who had swindled them out of their money, and cries of "hang them," "lynch them," and others of a similar nature were heard. Considerable dissatisfaction was expressed against the receiver, Mr. KNAPP. It was with difficulty that Mr. HOGAN could obtain a hearing, to inform the assembly that it was no part of Mr. KNAPP's duty to prosecute the officers of the bank, but to endeavor to draw in the assets and make a payment to depositors as soon as possible.

A resolution was passed calling upon the Committee to prevent the bank being thrown into bankruptcy.

Mr. FOX, a former trustee, who had assisted the Committee in their investigations, was called upon to address the meeting. He said that he had taken no active part in the management of the bank for nearly two years. In August last, previous to his sailing for Europe, he had called upon Mr. BOOTH, the director, and Mr. "HANK" SMITH, and was informed by them that the bank was in a flourishing condition, and that they had $70,000 lying idle which they proposed to invest at seven per cent., so that they might pay the depositors interest at six per cent, without having to use their own money. He said also that they had made away with $28,000 on pretended securities, not one of which had ever appeared in the bank. These men, he had learned, were criminally liable for the frauds perpetrated, and suit had that day been commenced against the Avenue C Railroad Company. After all the injustice he had made, he was able to say that the depositors would probably all be paid fifty cents on the dollar.

A resolution was then carried discharging the old Committee of five, and appointing a Committee of four, consisting of Messrs. HOGAN, PHILIP CLAYTON, SULLIVAN and FOX. Another resolution was then passed, authorizing these gentlemen to engage counsel—first, to prevent the institution being thrown into bankruptcy; second, to institute criminal proceedings against the officers of the bank, and to report progress at the next meeting of the depositors. The meeting, after passing a vote of thanks to the Chairman for the report, adjourned.

Heavy Robbery in the Sleeping-Cars of a Washington Train—Senators and Congressmen the Victims.

The passenger express train which left New-York on the night of the 22d inst., at 9½ P. M., for Washington, was robbed at some hour of the night of a quantity of jewelry, valued in all at over $2,000. The circumstances of the affair are supposed to be these: On the train were several Senators and members of Congress, returning to the capital. These with the other passengers retired to their births in the sleeping cars, of which there were three, at the usual hour, about 10½, putting their watches and other valuables under the pillows. After the train left Havre de Grace, it is supposed, some skillful thief "went through" the whole three sleeping-cars, and made a clean sweep of every article worth the taking which he could find under the pillows of the sleepers. The robbery was not discovered till the train reached Washington, at 6½ A. M., when the passengers turned out to dress. The case is one which calls for and will probably receive a thorough investigation.

THE CUSTOM-HOUSE INQUIRY.

Evening Session—Mr. Thompson, the Weigher, on the Stand—The General Order Business Again.

[The report of the morning session will be found on the second page.]

At the evening session the first witness was JAMES M. THOMPSON, the weigher, who in a very vigorous and decided manner denied the charges made against him by Mr. GRESLEY, Gen. PALMER, and the discharged laborers who testified against him. He was followed by Mr. GALE, a merchant, who testified against the General Order system, representing, like so many others, the testimony he gave before Senator PATTERSON's Committee a year ago. PETER RAFFERTY then complained that at a Custom-house sale of unclaimed goods, he brought several boxes, which, on opening, turned out to contain nothing or mere rubbish, among other things a box said to contain tea, "turned out," he said, "tea-totally empty."

THE EVIDENCE.

The Committee resumed its sittings at 7½. A communication was read from the agent of the Cunard line inviting the Committee to visit the docks and warehouses of the Company; and another from Mr. CORNELL, denying the statement of Mr. BLOOMFIELD in relation to the bribing of an inspector named WOOD, there being no inspector of that name in the service. After some discussion between the members of the Committee, JAMES M. THOMPSON was placed on the stand.

C. W. THOMPSON'S TESTIMONY.

By Mr. Buckingham—I am a weigher in the Customs, and have been for a year past. I was present at the unloading of the British ship Vesta. None of the goods of her cargo were sent away without weighing, with the exception of some barrels of soda-ash and bleaching-powders. We do not always weigh those. We have a man named MOORE in the office. His duties are various. He is sometimes occupied six, eight, or ten hours a day. We never pay him more than forty cents per hour; I knew of no time when he has been away and drawn his pay, and he could not have done it without my knowledge. I know something of the primary election in the Twenty-first Assembly District; I did not force my men to vote in any one way there; I only asked them to support the ticket headed by WILLIAM HAW, Jr. The election was a perfectly fair one, peaceable and quiet; there was no club law, nor was any one excluded from the room so far as I saw.

By Mr. Pratt—I was present only part of the time the Vesta was unloaded. The weight of the barrels of soda-ash which were not weighed was taken from the head of the barrel. I had only two men at the time, through the insubordination of the men who ought to have been working under my foreman. The longshoremen will not work for a United States weigher, for they only get an hour or two's work from him, and lose better chances elsewhere. There were on the Vesta 238 of these chemicals, and of these fifty or thirty were passed weighed, through the insubordination mentioned. I never pay men for more time than they actually work. I have never divided my gang with the City weigher and charged the Government for all of them, and I have never paid Harbor Masters to put messengers in my place.

Q.—Have you known gambling to be carried on in your office? A.—There has never been any gambling there that I know of; I never made an assessment on my men for political purposes; I have asked them to contribute to support the best Democratic ticket; I have held it almost a religious duty to do so; I never knew them go to a primary meeting armed with clubs; I know Mr. PALMER, once Deputy Appraiser.

Mr. PRATT here read a statement of Mr. PALMER, intimating that Mr. THOMPSON had once told him he (PALMER) had one of the best places in New-York, because he could make any amount of money by allowance to merchants for damages; and offering to collect the moneys so obtained and share them with PALMER.

Q.—What are the facts in relation to that? A.—I solemnly declare, in the presence of my God and these witnesses, that I never made such a proposition to Mr. PALMER in my life—his statement is totally false in every particular.

Some applause followed this declaration of the witness. Senator BUCKINGHAM said if such a statement was reported he should at once order the room to be cleared.

Q.—What did Mr. PALMER say to you in reference to your request that two men in his employ should be retained? A.—He told me to give myself no uneasiness, that the men should be retained, and they were retained. I was appointed Enforcer under Mr. FENTON at the solicitation of State Senator WILLIAM LAIMBEER, Jr.; I noticed Mr. GRESLEY's testimony in relation to Fenton men in the Custom-house being obliged to pretend they were Conkling men to keep their places; Mr. GRESLEY has made a great mistake in saying I was one of the wire Mr. FENTON's friends after 1870; I was appointed in the Custom-house in the beginning of 1871, at the request of GEORGE OPDYKE. When the troubles broke out between Mr. FENTON and Mr. CONKLING I considered it my duty to adhere to Gen. GRANT as the real head of the Republican party. I told Mr. GRESLEY, Mr. OPDYKE and other gentlemen, I did so. Mr. GRESLEY makes a mistake in saying I still act with Mr. FENTON's friends. I have cut loose from the so-called Fenton men since 1870.

The witness desired to submit the following receipt, which he said would effectually answer the charges made by one AMOS ELIOT against him. The receipt reads as follows:

Received, New-York, Dec. 12, 1871, from Mr. JAMES M. THOMPSON, $27 50, making a total of three hundred and seven (307) dollars, being the amount collected by him on a subscription list, the Finance Committee of the Twenty-first District Republican Association.

S. H. KNAPP, Treasurer.

He also submitted a letter from the Secretary of the Association, showing that on the report of the Finance Committee appear the names of JAMES RILEY, JAMES ELLIOTT, and PATRICK CALLAHAN, as having each subscribed $5, which was only subscribed for by the Chairman of the Committee.

TESTIMONY OF GEORGE G. GALE.

GEORGE G. GALE, dealer in silks, &c., was the next witness.

By Mr. Casserly—I have had some experience in the General Order business. I don't think the way in which the thing is fixed now is as good as the old. I have had an experience of some seven or eight years. The present rates are much higher than the old ones. We get our goods from the Hamburg and Bremen line. Under the old system we used to get our goods for seventy-five cents and $1 per package; now we have to pay as high as $1 50 per package. I was insulted once about a small parcel. I went to get it at the store in Washington-street, of Lee and Stockking; they wanted me to pay twelve shillings, and I refused. I took the bill to Mr. SHERRY and on my remonstrance, he struck of twenty-five cents; I went back to the store, and the young clerk insultingly refused to make the deduction. There was a petition got up among the merchants to have some change made in the General Order system, and I called on Mr. GRESLEY with it, but there was nothing came of it; the ultimate result of our interview was, that Mr. GRESLEY said that he must protect his party. The petition was sent on to Washington, and I heard Secretary BOUTWELL wrote to Mr. GRESLEY, saying that the changes should be made; but they were not. I know nothing of a similar letter from the Secretary to Mr. MURPHY. We have never had a loss at General Order store since 1867. I think we should have forty-eight hours to get our permits after the arrival of the vessel is announced. I have always found that the General Order goods were invariably taken away from the dock first. When the store was once in Hoboken nothing of the sort occurred, and altogether I much prefer the old system. The goods ought to be removed in this order: First, the public store; second, the warehouse; and then the General Order; bus from my observation, this order is reversed.

By Senator Howe—When the General Order system was carried on over the other side of the river, there was no additional expense, nor were our goods ever detained at Hoboken. I understand that Secretary BOUTWELL advised Mr. GRESLEY to transfer the stores from this side of the river to the other side. A vessel may be coming up the stream and the Custom-house officials immediately enters her under General Order several hours before she touches the dock. I understand the moment a vessel touches the dock, even if it is at night, she is placed under General Order. Our invoices, as a general rule, come with the vessel. If I had my permit before she touched the dock, I should not be permitted to go aboard.

CUSTOM-HOUSE SALES.

Mr. PETER RAFFERTY, of No. 77 Henry-street, testified concerning Custom-house sales of unclaimed and stolen property.

By Senator Casserly—I have had a great deal to do with Custom-house auction sales. In August, 1869, I attended a sale and bought several lots, among them a box said to contain English prints. I paid $11 50 for it. When I opened it at my residence I found there was nothing in it but straw. Among other lots was a chest said to contain tea, but it was tea-totally empty. (Laughter.) As soon as I found that I had been swindled, I made an effort to see the Collector. Failing to do so, I sued him for damages in the Marine Court, but the case was shortly afterward moved to the United States Court, where it is now pending. I have never purchased any goods at any other sale. (Laughter.)

By Senator Pratt—I saw the catalogue some days before the sale. I read the conditions of the sale. I read that part of it which says "no allowance will be made for any discrepancy," but as it was the last piece I then expected to find a fraud, I did not think much about it.

Curiosities of Custom-House Evidence.

The Tribune of yesterday made a great parade of a contradiction which its reporter, ALLEN LEET, was anxious to present to the Senate Committee, and as its reporter testified yesterday, it will get up a hullabaloo today. Let us go back and see the facts. The Tribune, in an editorial article, published just before the Committee first met, said, among other things, "In this petition there was no answer, and LEET, STOCKING & Co. still have the exclusive control of the General Order business." As this statement was not true, Mr. WHITELAW REID was asked by the Committee what his authority was for the statement, and he replied: "The authority was a statement by Col. LEET to Mr. ALLEN LEET, his cousin, now on the Tribune." Col. LEET further said, as his cousin, A. A. LEET, the Tribune reporter states, that he had made a great deal of money out of this business, and excused what were popularly called extortions, by stating that the like had been tolerated under every Administration."

Every one would understand from this, and the Tribune intended every one to understand, that Col. LEET not only admitted that he had made a great deal of money out of the General Order business, but that there were "extortions" in that business. Now, let us see what the facts are. Col. LEET, on being sworn, said: "I don't know any such person; I don't know the Mr. LEET in the Tribune staff; I never made that statement to any LEET, or to any one else. I fully deny the truth of this statement." So the case stood till yesterday, when the Tribune's reporter appeared before the Committee. After swearing to an alleged interview with Col. LEET, in Philadelphia, in 1861, and to two other interviews in 1870 and 1871, when he applied to Col. LEET for employment for a brother-in-law, the Tribune LEET proceeded to say that Col. LEET never told him that he had made a great deal of money out of the General Order business, and that the statement of the Tribune and its editor was, to that extent, untrue. The Tribune LEET further said, that though Col. LEET spoke of "extortions," the conversation had no reference whatever to the General Order business, that the latter subject was not mentioned at all, but that the reference was to general Custom-house matters. After this direct admission that the Tribune article was in one respect false, and in another a gross misrepresentation, it is not very important whether Tribune LEET and Col. LEET are cousins or not, but it may be as well to add that Col. LEET, being recalled, swore that he was not in Philadelphia at the time Tribune LEET says he met him there, and that he doesn't know him as a cousin; that between 1854 or 1855 and the close of the war he was never in Philadelphia, and consequently did not meet Tribune LEET there in 1861, or at any other time; that he never had any genealogy of the LEET family, and consequently never exhibited any to Tribune LEET.

THE MARKET SAVINGS BANK.

An Attachment Issued Against the Property of Henry B. Conklin, Late Secretary.

Mr. JAMES DENNIS, the receiver of the Market Bank, made application to Judge BARRETT, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, for an attachment against the property of HENRY B. CONKLIN, the former Secretary of the bank. The application was made on affidavits, one of which was by the receiver, in which he says that the late cashier is indebted to the bank in the sum of $126,000, which amount was converted by CONKLIN to his own use; that CONKLIN had confessed to such appropriation; that up to Saturday last the latter had been assisting him (the receiver) in relation to the affairs of the bank; that since that time he (CONKLIN) and not been seen in this City, and it was believed he had absconded.

The other affidavit was sworn to by JAMES S. CARPENTER, who stated that CONKLIN had admitted to him that he had converted $125,000 of the bank funds to his own use, and that at the Grand Hotel on last Sunday CONKLIN admitted that he intended to go to Canada, but said he would see him the next day; that, failing to see CONKLIN as promised, deponent called on Mr. HIGHAM yesterday at the latter's residence, and was told that he had left that morning by the Erie Railroad.

The Court granted the attachment.

Another Outrage by the Lowrey Outlaws—Two Ladies Wounded.

From the Wilmington (N. C.) Star, Jan. 23.

On Sunday night, about 11 o'clock, Mr. W. C. McNEILL, about sixty or seventy years of age, living at Moss Neck, in Robeson County, heard a noise in his smoke-house, and upon going out and finding that some one was inside, he asked what they were doing. The reply was, "It is none of your business." Mr. McNEILL answered, "I will show you whether it is any of my business or not," and returned to the house for his gun, securing his coat upon the event back into the yard. His wife and daughter, who were, of course, badly frightened, following him as far as the piazza, and trying to dissuade him from interfering with them. Just as they had stepped into the piazza a volley was fired from the robbers in the smoke-house, which resulted in the shooting of Mrs. McNEILL in the thigh, and her daughter—a young lady about eighteen or nineteen years old—in the shoulder, but not hurting Mr. McNEILL. The young lady is reported to be mortally wounded, but it is believed that Mrs. McNEILL will recover. Mr. McNEILL recognized the voice of deponent BENNY LOWRY in the spokesman of the party, and as there were four shots in the volley fired, it is taken for granted that he had at least three of his gang with him. After the shooting the outlaws retired. No physician could be procured Sunday night, but yesterday Dr. LEWIS was to attend the sufferers yesterday morning. Mr. McNEILL was the father-in-law of Mr. JOHN TAYLOR, who was murdered by the outlaws at Moss Neck, and is owner of the mill property at that place. Great excitement prevails throughout the county.
